

RALPH MCGILLThe Truce
Of the Bear

To be sure, Rudyard Kipling was an imperialist, even as his critics say. But, with the Soviets more imperialistic than the Tsars, and even now holding as many nations in a colonial status as Great Britain ever did, perhaps there cannot be too much objection to quoting from the man, who was, after all, a great maker of phrases and painter of images.

The current Soviet note to Britain, which is a smart move in the checker game of diplomacy, designed to distract attention from the promised meeting of Foreign Ministers and also an attempt to split the British away from co-operation with the United States on the Chinese question, reminds me of a Kipling poem. It was one which angered the Tsar and it also irritates the Kremlin. It is the story of a blind hunter in the passes of Afghanistan, whose face was a mass of ugly scars about his sightless eyes. He lived by sums given him for telling his story of warning against being deceived by Adam-zad, the bear.

The title of the poem is "The Truce of the Bear." The beggar, once a great hunter, relates how the bear rose up, with his paws lifted as in supplication and how he, the hunter, therefore withheld his fire as the bear came nearer and nearer—and then tipped the hunter's face away.

"When he stands up as pleading, in weaving, man-brute guise, When he veils the hate and cunning of the little, swinish eyes, When he shows as seeking quarter, with paws like hands in prayer, That is the time of peril—the time of the Truce of the Bear!"

The British will know enough not to walk too close. They will, being skilled in such things and divided by no domestic bloc which puts Chiang Kai-shek first, remain on the balls of their diplomatic feet, able to duck and dodge.

They will listen. But they will not fail to see the real intent of the newest Truce of the Bear—which ignores the United States through the technicality of replying to a British note, though we, too, have sent a note.

They will surely not allow the Meeting of Ministers to be sabotaged.

Mao Tse-tung

For a time the whereabouts of Mao Tse-tung, the Chinese Communist leader, has been made a mystery, perhaps designedly. He has been reported as being ill with a heart attack; as in conference in Moscow, and as having returned from that city.

This Soviet note to Britain would indicate the latter is the more accurate. It also portends the Soviet-Peiping plan is to try and split Great Britain and the United States on the basis of China. The Chinese may be expected to make some gesture about guaranteeing Hong Kong, which the Communists desperately need as a port of trade and espionage. Peiping may also make official the British recognition of their regime.

Formosa

So, we will see, in a few days, or sooner, the island of Formosa come back into sharp focus. The British have long said Chiang should be left to shift for himself. In this country the Chiang lobby has lately been crying that the Generalissimo should be allowed to invade the Chinese coast and that our fleet should be withdrawn to so enable him.

This is a good time to do so. But what this shrewdly directed lobby has not said is that if there is an invasion we will have to supply the invasion fleet to land on the Chinese coast; that the United States will be forced to equip him for such a landing and that we will be forced, in the event he lands, to maintain a stream of supply to him if it is to succeed.

That is so obviously a throat-cutting for the United States that we will not fall for it, but we will be monstrously confused the while.

By all means, withdraw our fleet from Formosa and allow Chiang to make his move—if that is what they want. But, in the words of William Lawrence, of the New York Times, it is well to keep in mind in all this talk of an invasion by Chiang, that he was chased to Formosa. How can he invade?

The Soviets would like to choose another battleground for us.

They want most of all to have us fighting on the Chinese mainland.

That would unify all China; would destroy the guerrillas now operating against Mao, and would make it impossible for us to give any attention to Europe.

"That is the time of peril—the time of the Truce of the Bear."

Stirred By Asia Threat

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

NEW YORK, Feb. 25—Gen. Douglas MacArthur warned Sunday that Communist aggression in Asia was reaching toward "a war-making potential to point at the heart of Europe and America" and must be "decisively defeated."

In a message read at the fourth Anti-Communist Convention meeting in Carnegie Hall, the Far East Commander-in-Chief said consolidation of Asia under Communist power would pose "a threat to the very doorstep of every American home."

"Our people must awaken to the reality of this threat and resist complacent thinking that Asia is a long way off," Gen. MacArthur wrote. "Let only those who would see freedom perish ignore the potentiality of this threat."

The General's message was in response to a letter request by George Djarnoff, naturalized white Russian publicist, organizational director of the convention, promoter also of the first, second and third conventions held in 1931, 1932 and 1933. Sunday's meeting was under auspices of 25 veterans', patriotic and women's groups, including Veterans of Foreign Wars, whose national commander, Charles C. Ralls, delivered the principal address.

Ralls urged formation of a new government agency to "fight Communism and sell Democracy" and a "World Council to Combat Communism."

It is time to fight fire with fire, Ralls said. "We must maintain a forceful propaganda, and sustain an intellectual enthusiasm against Communism in all its hydra-headed aspects. The lies, the intrigue, the deceit, the thievery and the clearly defined plans for world conquest of the Soviet Union must be thoroughly understood by every true American."

A capacity audience of 3,000 persons cheered and applauded Gen. MacArthur's message, which declared that he was "heartened."

Ridgway Checks UN Army
In Push Toward Parallel

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD

KOREAN FRONT, Feb. 25—(P)—The U. S. Eighth Army probably could break loose and move up to the 38th parallel in 24 hours any day it chose to do so.

Allied military authorities believe armored columns could speed to the parallel with little or no opposition, bypassing groups of enemy and avoiding strongly-held towns.

But Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway is holding tight check on the army he commands. In the present tactical situation, it is not likely he will switch to the unrestrained, all-out tactics made famous by the late Gen. Patton in Europe.

He has chosen a safer policy of "limited offensive." Armored and infantry columns fan out into a relatively small portion of enemy territory, sweeping it clear of hostile troops. Then the rest of the Eighth Army organized for defense in depth, moves up and occupies the area.

It is a principle of mop-up and follow-through.

"I am not interested in real estate—just in killing the enemy," Ridgway has said.

These aims are reminiscent of Francis Marion, the Carolina swamp fox, who dealt the British misery during the Revolutionary War. Like Ridgway, Marion raided enemy towns or camps, delivered hard blows and then retired.

There was a poem about Marion and his methods:

"A moment in a British camp,
"A moment, then away,
"Back to pathless forests,
"For ever and a day."

Would Send GIs
Subject to Checks

By ROBERT F. WHITNEY
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—Presidential powers to send United States ground troops to Europe would not be abridged by a resolution drawn up by two powerful Democratic Senate committee chairmen.

Sens. Connally, of Texas, chairman of the Foreign Relations committee, and Russell, Georgia, of the Armed Services committee, Sunday night made public their resolution of guidance to President Truman on this great public issue.

Their proposal would have the Senate approve additional forces for the frontier of the cold war subject to Mr. Truman's making sure that our Allies there are doing their best at building defenses with men and material.

The Connally-Russell resolution is designed as a substitute for the proposal of Sen. Wherry, Republican, Nebraska. Wherry, the minority floor leader, would have the Senate order Mr. Truman to withhold additional troops until Congress had approved.

It is before the committees of Connally and Russell that hearings are in progress on the Wherry resolution. Saturday the committees heard Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as for "overwhelming" repudiation of the Wherry proposal.

Monday at 10 a. m. Sen. Wherry, and Sen. Taft, Ohio, the Republican policy leader of the Senate, will be witnesses on the question. Tuesday, former President Herbert Hoover will present his views. Earlier, Hoover had declined to appear.

Sen. Taft Sunday night said that he found the Connally-Russell proposal unsatisfactory. He said he would draft an amendment to hold up the movement of additional United States troops abroad until the Western European countries guarantee to meet their defense quotas.

Taft does not oppose the six divisions which the U. S. would presently station in Europe (four in addition to the two already there). But he said he believes that before we make that commitment the U. S. should have a contractual understanding with the European nations detailing their contribution to the defense force under command of General of the Army Eisenhower.

The Connally-Russell resolution would put the Senate on record thus:

"The threat to the security of the United States and our North Atlantic treaty partners makes it necessary for the United States to station abroad such units of our armed forces as may be necessary and appropriate to contribute our fair share of the forces needed for the joint defense of the North Atlantic area."

It would also state that the President should make sure that treaty partners are making contributions commensurate with their ability.

It would ask the President to consult with U. S. defense leaders, with Gen. Eisenhower and with the foreign and Armed Services committees of the Senate and House before ordering troops abroad.

It would require Mr. Truman to report every six months on the progress of the United States defense program to the House of Representatives.

The resolution would approve Gen. Eisenhower as supreme commander in Europe.

AUTO PLUNGES OFF BRIDGE—Four Boston skiers escaped serious injury when their automobile crashed through a railing on the Insdale-Brattleboro, Vt., bridge and plunged 25 feet to the ice-covered Connecticut River. The youths, Owen McEleney, 20; Paul Beichel, 21; James Boylan, 21, and John Jankum, 20, were en route to Montreal for a weekend of skiing when the crash occurred.

Early Spring
Due to Stay
2 More Days

A peek-a-boo sun and mid-seventy temperatures will highlight Atlanta's weather picture Monday and again Tuesday, according to the Weather Bureau.

Continued warm and partly cloudy constitutes the two-day forecast. But "partly cloudy" doesn't rule out sunshine, the weatherman pointed out. He said the sun will be "in and out."

High readings of 75 degrees are expected Monday and Tuesday after indicated morning lows of 50 Monday and 52 Tuesday.

Sunday the mercury hit 73 here—16 degrees above normal for the date—and highways and golf courses were crowded with Atlantans "outing" in the warm wave.

Spring, as the forecaster put it, has taken a "real premature grip on the City."

Czech Purge,

Grip SeenGottwald Calls
Clementis Traitor

By C. L. SULZBERGER
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

PARIS, Feb. 25—A Soviet military mission of several hundred officers and technicians is reliably reported to be established in Czechoslovakia now. The size of the mission—which has grown from an original small group to one which some sources estimated as large as 1,000—cannot accurately be confirmed since it is spread around the country.

At the same time, it was indicated Sunday night that Vladimir Clementis, who has been missing from his usual haunts in Prague since Jan. 22, may well be in the clutches of Czechoslovak secret police or their Soviet affiliates.

President Klement Gottwald in a speech reported by the Communist newspaper Rude Pravo accused Clementis, former foreign minister, of having been involved in a "large-scale conspiracy" seeking to bring the country into the "camp of imperialism."

The president, who formerly had been considered a personal friend of Clementis and had reportedly guaranteed his safety on returning to Czechoslovakia from the United Nations Assembly in 1949, linked him with a plot allegedly involving Otto Sling and Mrs. Marie Svermova, important members of the Czechoslovak party. The implication is that Clementis has not escaped the country.

Thus, little by little, it would appear that the Soviet Union is tightening its grip upon its most "bourgeois" satellite in Eastern Europe and supervising a brand new purge while simultaneously increasing its military grip.

Quite clearly the principal task of the mission is to train the new "purified" Czechoslovak army in Soviet tactics and weapons.

Some rumors—which cannot be verified—state that Marshal Konev, a great Soviet war leader, has been posted to Czechoslovakia with a task similar to that of his colleague, Marshal Rokossovski, in Poland.

Certainly one of the primary jobs at hand for the Soviet military mission is supervising the political indoctrination of the Czechoslovak army. A series of purges has been taking place among somewhat reluctant Communists ever since the Soviet-directed coup d'etat of 1948.

Latest of these purges is now under way. Concurrent with the disappearance from his bank of office of Clementis on Jan. 22—when his home was also placed under guard—a wholesale cleanup of government officials has occurred.

More than 100 functionaries of the foreign trade ministry were removed—some say because of growing discontent with Soviet-Czechoslovakian trade—and a large number of foreign office members have disappeared from their desks.

It is indicated that when the Soviet army in Eastern Europe holds its regular Spring maneuvers this year it will be joined by Polish and Czechoslovak divisions.

COMES THE PURGE
Klement GottwaldRussia Held

Broad Talks

By HARRISON E. SALISBURY
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

MOSCOW, Feb. 25—It seemed more than apparent Sunday to Moscow diplomatic observers that the Soviet Union will enter the proposed foreign ministers' meeting ready and willing—if not actually eager—to discuss the broadest range of questions connected with present world tension.

This impression, already widely held in Moscow, was powerfully reinforced by the latest Soviet note to Britain, which contained a number of new and extremely important points. It was expected that a Soviet reply to the western proposal for a foreign ministers' meeting in Paris on March 5 to draft an agenda for the conference will be very shortly forthcoming.

In the light of the note to London it was felt more strongly than

United Nations troops slogged northward through mud and over mountains to register gains ranging up to five miles in the central fighting area, and up to 20 miles against no opposition in the Chechon sector.

Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond, commander of the 10th Corps, said Communist forces attempting to take the Allied supply hub of Chechon were turned back in "a virtual rout."

Almond said his troops had inflicted 64,000 casualties on the enemy since Jan. 4.

Almond said large numbers of Red troops escaped from the Hoengsong - Pyongchang - Chechon triangle before the X Corps could close a pincers movement on them. He added, however, that enough enemy troops were killed to destroy the combat effectiveness of two North Korean corps.

Gen. MacArthur's Monday morning communique told of Allied gains of one to two miles in some areas. It said UN troops maintained the initiative in the important Pyongchang - Hoengsong sector despite muddy terrain and stiff Communist delaying actions.

Farther to the East, the Communists threw back United Nations patrols and appeared to be strengthening positions for the defense of Seoul. UN patrols trying to go north of the Han River west of Yangpyong were forced back by Communist fire.

MacArthur's communique said the enemy continued to make contact in some areas "in an effort to regroup his forces for counterattack."

A dispatch from Ninth Corps headquarters said an American division reported the appearance of Communist artillery in that sector for the first time.

Air force releases said American pilots ranging deep into North Korea Sunday night spotted the heaviest enemy traffic in two weeks and attacked more than one hundred vehicles, including three trains.

Four American superforts over North Korea in the Suncheon area fought off six Soviet MIG-15 jet fighters, possibly damaging one of the Soviet planes. None of the B-29s was damaged.

An Eighth Army communique said two Chinese companies attacked behind a 10-minute artillery barrage Sunday night four miles west of Hoengsong, but were beaten back by South Korean troops.

Other front dispatches reported little or no contact with the enemy Monday, indicating a withdrawal in most sectors.

However, two battalions of Chinese counterattacked South Koreans a few miles northwest of Hoengsong and brought their drive

Bright Future Seen In Full Development Of Alabama-Coosa

Usage Up to People, Water Group Says

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—(AP)—Full development of the Alabama-Coosa River basin in Alabama and Georgia will bring a bright future to the region, a task force of the President's Water Policy Commission predicted Sunday.

"Here is the opportunity for a fuller life for the people of the area," the task force reported. But it added that this opportunity depends upon the desires and initiative of the people in furthering development of the area.

"Much can be done to make life more healthful and enjoyable for future generations when its (the basin's) resources are fully used and their waste and destruction halted," the staff study said.

"The timber lands, long despoiled of their cover, can contribute to the total welfare. The farmlands can more fully contribute their share to a fruitful life when used to grow crops for which they are best fitted. They will no longer contribute sediment and the richness of their soils to the streams."

"The destructive energy of the water will be put to beneficial use to turn the wheels of industry, to make possible a better livelihood, to relieve the burden of the housewife, and to make life itself more enjoyable. Industry will add value to the products of the forest and farm, and to products of less fortunate areas."

The study noted that Congress already has approved an Army Engineer plan for flood control, navigation and power on the Alabama-Coosa.

Within this "well-conceived framework," it said, can be integrated planning for other functions "including land and forest improvement programs, industrial development, water supply and pollution control, mineral resource use, fish and wildlife, and recreation."

Development of the basin will require many years the report said.

The initial stage would encompass four major projects for power, navigation and flood control.

These would be Jones Bluff and Millers Ferry projects for power and navigation; Howell Mill shoals for power, flood control and future navigation; and Clairborne for navigation and possible future power.

Channel improvements with the navigation dams would provide a 9-foot channel to Montgomery. In this connection the report noted that should industrial activity in the upper portion of the Coosa basin increase, navigation could be extended to Rome.

The projects would provide between 200,000 and 300,000 kilowatts of installed power, said the study.

Twenty-three additional reservoir projects are included in the approved plan of the Army Engineers and the power commission has suggested three more. Six channel improvement projects, installation of locks at private power dams and increased capacity at private power plants would substantially complete the construction program now envisioned, said the report.

The report noted that there are six power projects already in operation on the river and said that in addition to Howell Mill shoals, Jones Bluff and Millers Ferry 21 other power projects are possible. The total potential would be 1,800,000 kilowatts of installed capacity, the report said.

The basin's major problem, said the study, is to provide adequate economic opportunity for its people.

Two broad approaches to the problem, the report said, are to provide additional employment opportunities off the farm and to make possible higher income for those remaining on farms by improved land use.

Industrial expansion, it continued, can be stimulated and encouraged by carefully planned use of the basin's water resources.

Tennessee Gains Cited

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—(AP)—The Tennessee Valley was cited today as an example of what can be achieved by unified development of a river basin.

The citation came in a staff report of the President's Water Resources Policy Commission which has completed a study of 10 of the nation's river valleys.

The report listed these achievements in the Tennessee Valley program:

1. The co-operation and participation of state and local agencies has been effectively enlisted.

2. The value of having centralized regional responsibility has been shown.

3. The economic advantages and benefits that can come from an electric power program which emphasizes low rates, abundant use and public service have been demonstrated.

4. The financial participation of the people of the valley—providing opportunities for private investment—has been obtained.

5. The problem of tax replacement that arises when federal or public agencies replace tax-paying private agencies has been solved satisfactorily.

6. Pioneering work has been done by the Tennessee Valley Authority in resettling families on a satisfactory basis when they were forced to move from reservoir lands after the construction of dams.

The report said, however, that there are problems remaining in the valley that must be solved "before the people will reap the full value from their natural resources, and before water resources will be fully integrated."

Water Group Maps River Use Plan

By PAUL F. KENNEDY
WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—The reclamation and full utilization of Americans' most precious sources of water, the great river basins, has been blue-printed in the third and last volume in the report of the President's Water Resources Policy Commission which was sent to the White House Sunday.

The 800-page volume, entitled "Ten Rivers in America's Future," presents exhaustive studies of 10 complete river basins, five in the West and five in the East. In its two previous volumes, "A Water Policy for the American People" and "Water Resources Law," the Commission laid the groundwork for an over-all policy of treating U. S. water resources problems in terms of river basins.

The present volume spells out that policy on the stated premise that "a river basin is an entity; the river is its common denominator."

The five basins studied in the West are: Columbia, Central Valley of California, Missouri, Rio Grande and the Colorado. The five in the East: The Connecticut, the Alabama-Coosa, Potomac, Ohio and Tennessee.

In its introduction the present volume explains, "The river basin is composed of all the land that drains to the river. It encompasses the farms in the lowlands and plains, the pastures on the rolling hills and the forests of the mountains."

"It includes all the various communities within it and the industries that support its commerce. It contains the river as the predominant feature which sustains human needs that depend on water, and gives life to the economy of the region."

The Commission, in presenting its final volume, explained "The basins chosen do not, of course, include all the important ones in the country. Nor do they necessarily represent in every instance the ultimate planning units."

In the chapters given to each basin study, the report deals with the basin's present state of irrigation development; navigation facilities and improvements; water supply facilities; flood protection facilities; related land programs; special development possibilities such as in fisheries, recreation sites, etc., and multiple-purpose aspects of the basins.

The report notes that there are two or more projects into a single program.

In sub-classifications of these general subjects come such things as pollution control, irrigation procedures, soil conservation and hydroelectric power potentialities.

For each basin studied there is a hydrologic-region map showing the volume of flow and runoff for particular land areas within the basin; a map of the potential reservoirs and railroad relocation possibilities and a water resources and land use map for the entire basin.

The sum of the conclusions in each basin study is drawn into a projected plan for the basin's future. In the case of the Connecticut basin, the report states, "completion of the plan as envisaged would have a marked effect upon the whole social and economic structure of the basin. It would result in greater use of electric power and possible diversification of industry."

"It would result in clean and safe waters, well stocked with fish, waters that could be widely acclaimed for their healthful and popular recreational opportunities. It would result in a return of the forest as a basic resource and a healthy and prosperous, even if limited, agriculture. It would enable more industrial workers to have rural or suburban homes. On the whole, it would increase the prosperity not only of the basin but of all New England."

With presentation of the final volume the Commission, appointed by the President last summer, has finished its major task. It will remain as a body, however, for consultation purposes, Morris L. Cooke, chairman, explained. Members, in addition to Cooke are: Paul S. Burgess, Lewis Webster Jones, Samuel B. Morris, Leland Olds, Roland R. Renne and Gilbert F. White.

Peiping Quotes Jap in Tokyo As Assailing U. S. From Berlin

TOKYO, Monday, Feb. 26—(AP)—The Chinese Communist radio at Peiping, diligently battling out propaganda for the Communist "world peace council" meeting in Berlin, made a glaring error Saturday night.

The broadcasts, heard in Tokyo, quoted at length Japanese delegate Ikuo Oyama as saying at the Berlin meeting:

"The fact that I am here after surmounting many difficulties as the first Japanese to appear at an international democratic meeting signifies the determination of the Japanese people to wage resolute struggle against... American imperialism."

The only thing wrong was that Ikuo Oyama was still in Tokyo. The Japanese news agency Kyodo interviewed the designated "peace" delegate Sunday at Tokyo University Hospital. He has been confined there since Aug. 11 with a liver ailment.

The Japanese Socialist said he had not even sent a message to the Berlin meeting.

Home From Pacific, Dulles Confident Peace Possible

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—(AP)—John Foster Dulles returned from almost five weeks of Far Eastern conferences Sunday expressing confidence "that the way has been paved for the reinforcement of peace, order and justice by positive and co-operative action in the Pacific Island area."

This was taken as an optimistic report by Dulles on prospects for a possible Pacific pact, similar to the Atlantic pact, uniting Pacific nations against Communist aggression.

Secretary of State Acheson has said a Pacific pact is under discussion.

Dulles, President Truman's special envoy on the trip, told reporters "We are in shape to go ahead promptly" with the drafting of a Japanese peace treaty.

Dulles said he would report quickly to President Truman and State Department officials. He was greeted at the airport after his flight from Honolulu by acting Secretary of State James E. Webb and Assistant Secretary Dean Rusk.

"Our effort has been not merely to hasten a final settlement of the old war with Japan," Dulles said "but to find ways to provide insurance against the new aggression which threatens ominously in the Pacific, as elsewhere."

Dulles talked with leaders in Japan, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand.

His primary mission was to pave the way for a Japanese peace treaty, but the conferences produced considerable talk of a possible Pacific pact alliance, Australia, New Zealand and the U. S. were mentioned as the principal initial parties to the pact, with other anti-Communist nations possibly coming in later.

A delegation was appointed to attempt to persuade the world organization to reconsider some recent decisions, such as the one condemning China. Members of the delegation include Pietro Nenni, head of the pro-Communist Italian Socialist Party and council president, and Paul Robeson, American Negro singer. Robeson is not at the council meeting.

Council spokesmen said they will seek to establish contact with the UN secretariat either directly or through the Soviet bloc representatives at Lake Success.

Some 250 delegates from 81 countries are attending the meeting. The council in Western eyes is regarded as a medium for the Kremlin's propaganda campaign. However, Nenni said its proposal for the five-power peace pact expresses all the world's desires.

Nenni called UN in its present form "a branch of the White House."

Red-Backed Council Urges 5-Power Pact

BERLIN, Feb. 25—(AP)—The Communist-sponsored World Peace Council Sunday urged the United States, Britain, France, Red China and Russia to sign a five-power pact for the preservation of peace.

The council, which has been meeting in the Soviet sector of Berlin for several days, asked all nations of the world to support its Big Five proposal and said rejection of the plan would be regarded "as proof of the aggressive plans of the government concerned, who would then also bear the responsibility."

The council, which has bitterly attacked the United Nations during the current meeting, went on record in a resolution to the effect that UN has worked "disappointingly." The resolution said the functioning of UN had culminated in branding Red China an aggressor in Korea.

A delegation was appointed to attempt to persuade the world organization to reconsider some recent decisions, such as the one condemning China. Members of the delegation include Pietro Nenni, head of the pro-Communist Italian Socialist Party and council president, and Paul Robeson, American Negro singer. Labor Row Concessions Are Ready

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—(INS)—Economic Stabilizer Johnston Sunday was reported ready to send the Government's pay formula to the disrupted Wage Stabilization Board with recommendations for two major concessions to pacify labor.

Union sources predicted that while Johnston will not advocate any change in the general 10 percent increase allowable under the formula, he will suggest these modifications:

1. Some provision whereby increases above 10 percent can be granted in "hardship" cases.

2. That existing contracts containing cost-of-living "escalator" pay hike provisions be exempt from the rigid formula.

The latter chiefly concerns such unions as Walter Reuther's United Auto Workers (CIO) and the International Union of Electrical Workers.

James B. Carey, president of the latter (CIO) union, warned that 65,000 members employed in General Electric plants may be compelled to strike next month if wage increases they claim are due because of price boosts are not permitted under the Government's formula.

Chief aim of Johnston's move in sending the explosive question of wages back to the Board is to persuade labor to return its representatives who walked out in protest some days ago.

Johnston is expected to recommend that the board be reorganized, increasing membership of the tri-partite group from nine to 18. This would give labor, management and the public six members each instead of three.

Labor circles expect Johnston to hand down his decision Monday.

The government itself is not completely convinced of Western unanimity on the issue of German unity.

Theoretically the U. S., Britain and France are resolved not to accept any Soviet proposition for German unity unless the Russians give iron-clad assurances that unity will be accomplished under truly free conditions, which would mean abandonment of the whole Soviet position in East Germany and the advance of Western democratic practice to the borders of Poland.

But the German cabinet, especially Chancellor Adenauer, expect that "certain elements in France" would be willing to accept less than this from the Russians if in return they were assured of the demilitarization and neutrality of a united Germany.

These fears are not shared by American or British officials, but the question is raised: what would be the position of the U. S. if the French and a considerable proportion of the German people were willing to accept a Soviet formula for German unity and neutrality before a four-power conference?

W. German Soviet Gains Fret Allies

Red Propaganda Proving Effective

By DREW MIDDLETON
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution
FRANKFORT, Germany, Feb. 25—The Communist program for Germany, based on unity and neutrality, has won so much support in Western Germany that its introduction at a Big Four power meeting, it is felt, would have a critical effect on relations between the Western powers and the West German Federal Republic.

For the first time since October when, after publication of the Prague Protocol, Russian propagandists began to beat the toms for unity, Allied officials on the highest level are deeply concerned over the effect of the unity campaign on the people of Western Germany.

They recognize that the Federal government's distrust of the Russians' word is liable to be balanced by a mass desire to accept the glittering lures held out by the East German Communists: Unity, neutrality and peace.

It is also recognized that despite the number of speeches by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and other Western leaders, insidious Communist propaganda is having a telling effect on the great mass of people in the Federal Republic.

All this means that when the Western powers meet with the Soviet Union at a foreign ministers' conference they will face a new situation. Germany will not be present at the meeting, but it is to the Germans that all the discussion of this country will be addressed.

Time remains, in the view of responsible American officials, to write a definite policy for the Federal Republic toward the whole question of unity. But during the last six weeks, these officials have noticed a reluctance on the part of the Bundestag to frame a sort of policy which would be in accord with that of the U. S.

This may be, as one American official believes, a natural result of the slowness of the democratic process. But it also may result, as some British officials suggest, from a tendency among the deputies to pay more attention to the Communist proposals on unity than the cabinet has done.

The government itself is not completely convinced of Western unanimity on the issue of German unity.

Theoretically the U. S., Britain and France are resolved not to accept any Soviet proposition for German unity unless the Russians give iron-clad assurances that unity will be accomplished under truly free conditions, which would mean abandonment of the whole Soviet position in East Germany and the advance of Western democratic practice to the borders of Poland.

But the German cabinet, especially Chancellor Adenauer, expect that "certain elements in France" would be willing to accept less than this from the Russians if in return they were assured of the demilitarization and neutrality of a united Germany.

Trainmen's Dispute Shelved As Board Tackles Clerks Pay

By LOUIS STARK
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution
WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—The National Mediation Board sidetracked its attempt to settle the two-year-old dispute between trainmen and the railroads Sunday and renewed its efforts to work out a satisfactory compromise in the controversy affecting 1,000,000 non-operating employees.

At the end of a long afternoon of shuffling back and forth between the carriers and the non-operating union spokesmen, board members reported the situation was still deadlocked.

Stumbling block to a settlement apparently was the effective date of the new agreement.

The carriers are said to have expressed willingness to advance wages 12.5 cents an hour (the employees are asking for 25 cents), but want the arrangement to begin March 1. There would be no back pay for the men in this proposal.

The 15 nonoperating unions are willing to accept a 12.5 cents wage increase, but insist it should be made retroactive to Dec. 15.

Under a cost-of-living escalator clause, which is part of the discussion, the employees would receive additional pay by April 1. This, it is estimated by them, would mean a total wage increase of approximately 16 cents an hour.

Bound up in the question of the effective date of the agreement is 3.5 cents an hour. This 3.5 cents an hour actually amounts to $77,000,000 a year as every cent added to the pay of the nonoperating employees means $22,000,000 a year.

Should the agreement be dated Dec. 15 the escalator clause would bring by April 1 a total increase of 16 cents an hour, which would be a certainty. Three months later another cost-of-living raise might be probable.

However, should the March 1 date be used the workers' raise would only 12.5 cents an hour with no escalator adjustment on the cost of living until June. Thus the workers would always be 3.5 cents an hour behind what they would be getting under an agreement dated of December 15, in addition to losing back pay of 12.5 cents an hour for two and a half months.

The non-operating employees averaged $1,482 an hour for the first eight months of 1950, according to the carriers.

Proposed changes in rules have been placed on the conference table by the carriers. However, it is not believed this will delay a possible settlement. Rules have not been a real issue in this dispute. Neither side asked for any changes when the discussions began. Meanwhile W. P. Kennedy, president of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, and his committee were awaiting a call from the Mediation Board.

West Finds Illegal Red Traffic Flow

Goods Smuggled
To West Germany

BONN, Germany, Feb. 25—(AP). Western officials said Sunday Russian-directed Communists are smuggling illegal goods into Western Germany to finance Moscow's campaign against Western defense, including espionage.

Contraband nylons, cameras, ceramics and other consumer goods, they said, are being slipped through by East German Reds, then sold at high prices in West Germany. The proceeds in West marks go to the West German Communist Party, the officials said. They described the illegal traffic as "large."

The officials said some German sources estimate the Soviets are spending 20,000,000 marks (about $5,000,000) a year on espionage activities alone in West Germany. Only last week the Communists admitted a network of "people's correspondents" all over Western Germany will keep their superiors informed of military and industrial developments.

German officials disclosed the Communist agents also are sabotage experts. The Reds, they said, have threatened publicly to sabotage any rearmament program inside West Germany and to halt strategic materials going to the West.

Strategic materials are known to be flowing to the East despite Allied bans. Allied officials said the illegal Soviet "imports" are heavy and include many critical items. This means, they said, the Russians are doubly profiting by a two-way commerce across West Germany's leaky borders with the Iron Curtain countries.

The goods coming from the East are peddled in devious ways, they said. Some go direct to the black market. Dummy Communist firms probably funnel part of the goods to legitimate dealers who do not know the source.

The proceeds, besides being used for propaganda campaigns and spy work, the authorities said, have enabled the Soviets to step up their undercover bidding for war potential goods in West Germany. Communist agents were said to be scouring the Ruhr for oil field piping, Diesel engines and power-plant equipment.

These items recently have replaced machine tools, ball bearings and steel as top priority materials on the Soviets' shopping list although they still snap up any strategic goods available, authorities said.

Legion Names Defense Head

George M. Sweeney, Atlanta, has been appointed chairman of the Department of Georgia Civil Defense Committee of the American Legion, according to department headquarters here.

During World War II, Sweeney was instrumental in the formation of the Georgia State Guard, which was composed almost entirely of Legionnaires. His efforts on behalf of civil defense resulted in one of the few fully equipped and trained State Guards in the nation at the time of Pearl Harbor.

The Civil Defense Committee, in addition to Chairman Sweeney, will include Ed Cummings, of Columbus; George Hines, of Augusta; Roland Neel, of Macon; Roy Ottwell, of Cumming; Dean Owens, of Rome; John Fawcett, of Savannah; Robert Moore, of Dahlonega; Hoyt Wimpy, of Thomasville, and Frank Kopf, of Atlanta.

The committee has voted to request a conference with Gov. Talmadge, Adj. Gen. Ernest Vandiver, Legion Department Commander John Brock, and to recommend to the Governor that he authorize the Department of Georgia to organize the State Guard in the present crisis.

Probe of Honor Awards Asked

State American Legion officials want to know why the nation's top military honors are being bestowed upon high-ranking rear echelon officers while GIs in the front ranks perform heroically without recognition.

The Department of Georgia Executive Committee of the Legion has asked Congress to investigate the situation.

State Legion heads, at an executive conference in Macon, expressed dissatisfaction over reports in the Feb. 19 issue of Time Magazine, reporting presentation of medals to a general, an admiral and seven Japan-based staff officers of the Air Force.

The resolution was introduced by Guy O. Stone, Glenwood, national executive committeeman for the Legion, and W. L. Kilroy, Sr., Savannah, alternate committeeman, at the request of Chatham Post 36 and the George K. Ganam Post 184, both in Savannah.

Two Texans Die in Cafe Gun Duel

Waitress Witness To Double Killing

MINEOLA, Texas, Feb. 25—(AP)—A cattle dealer and a railroad conductor met in a hotel cafe and—standing only 10 feet apart—shot each other to death in a wild duel early Sunday.

The dying cattleman, his six-shooter empty, crawled to the conductor, already dead, and slashed him with a long-bladed pocket knife.

The fight occurred at 3 a. m. with only a waitress, Mrs. Kate Womack, to see it.

Chief of Police Bill Knippol said the men had been enemies for some time but "I don't know just what caused the trouble."

Knippol said Mrs. Womack told this story:

Rufus Browning, 55, the cattle dealer went into the cafe for a cup of coffee. A few minutes later, Joe Henderson, 45, entered.

"Keep your hands right where they're at," said Henderson. "I'm going to kill you."

"I'm just here to drink my coffee," Browning said.

While he drank, Henderson cursed him.

Browning drained his cup and started backing toward the door.

Henderson took a 9-mm. German pistol from behind his back and started shooting.

Browning whipped out a .38-caliber revolver and shot back.

Both men emptied their pistols, but Browning was hit only once, in the chest. Henderson was hit in the heart and in the stomach.

After both fell to the floor, Browning drew his knife, opened it, painfully crawled to Henderson and "cut up" the dead conductor.

Knippol said when he arrived at the cafe, Henderson was doubled up on his hands and knees.

"Dead, Browning was lying on his side next to the dead conductor."

"He asked me to turn him off his side," Knippol said. I told him, "Rufus, the stiller you lie the better off you'll be."

"One of my officers, Clarence Williamson, came in. Browning recognized him. 'Hello, Clarence,' he said."

"He asked me for some water. I said, 'I'll give you a little and you can rinse your mouth and then spit it out.' He did."

"He asked me if a doctor was coming."

"He's on his way now," I said. "Then he squeezed my hand and said 'Goodbye, Bill,' and he died, too."

Knippol said Browning, a widower, is survived by two sons and two daughters, all of Mineola.

Air Force's 'Seeing Eye' Used in Korea

FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, KOREA, Feb. 25—(AP)—"Shoran," the "seeing eye" of the U. S. Air Force, was used for the first time in the Korean War Saturday.

Shoran, a short range navigation aid developed late in World War II, uses the principles of radar.

However, it makes the computation of bomb release points easier because airmen do not have to see the target to make strikes. This makes possible effective bombing in all kinds of weather, day or night.

Four B-26 light bombers destroyed a bridge on the rail line north of Pyongyang in the first test of the system in the eight-month-old Korean campaign.

Stations of the first Shoran beacon unit throughout South Korea sent out signals for navigation and direction of bombardiers to the targets.

Lt. Col. Clair F. Ewing of Blue Rapids, Kans., commanding officer of the unit, said:

"We have been five months preparing the system for use in this theater, but the fluid condition of the war has not allowed us to set it up properly before. Now that the front has stabilized somewhat, we are able to operate."

The unit was brought to Korea last Summer by Capt. Chester L. Brown of Manns Choice, Pa., operations officer. He said:

"It sure makes all of us feel good to see it working after so long getting ready."

'Poison Pen' Youth Is Held

John C. Bills, special agent in charge of the FBI in Atlanta, announced Sunday that the FBI had taken into custody a 14-year-old boy who, Bills said, had been terrorizing prominent citizens in Southwest Atlanta for more than a month.

Bills said the youth admitted writing letters and making telephone calls to ministers, educators and well-to-do families, threatening death and destruction of homes by fire and explosives.

The FBI agent said the boy also admitted being on probation on a local charge of larceny. He was placed in Fulton Tower, Bills said, and will be handled under the Federal Juvenile Delinquency Act.

Improvement Unit Slates Election

Annual election of officers of the Central Area Improvement Association will be held at 3 p. m. Tuesday in a joint meeting of directors and members.

The meeting will be held in the directors' room of the First National Bank.

Took Car, $117,000, Overlooked Latter

DETROIT, Feb. 25—(AP)—The person who took this car was riding high—on $117,000 worth of American Express money orders—but he didn't know it.

The orders, convertible into cash, were stored in the trunk of a car stolen from Harvey Daniels, an American Express Company employee.

A nation-wide alarm was sent out after the car theft was reported.

But the car was found Sunday on a suburban parking lot, with the trunk unopened and the orders untouched.

Emory Bills All-Faculty Stage Play

Emory University professors have fallen in love with the stage.

The lure of the grease paint has attracted classroom authorities of all fields, ranging from chemistry to journalism. Even the deans are literally "getting into the act."

George Neely, associate professor of speech, might have been the "prof" that "raised the curtain" on the whole idea. He took a part in "Ladies of the Jury," a comedy presented by the Emory Players during the Fall quarter.

Then Richard Joel, journalism instructor, and Richard Maher, speech instructor, took their cues by appearing in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," presented by the Players recently.

Now the "footlight fever" has spread to other departments on the campus and an all-faculty production is the latest endeavor.

Mrs. Richard Hocking, wife of philosophy professor Richard Hocking, will direct the play "The King's Vigil," Tuesday in the church room auditorium at Emory. Her professor-production will include: Francis Benjamin, history professor; Dr. Leroy Loemker, dean of the graduate school; Dr. John E. Tilford, professor of English; Dr. Evangeline Papageorge, biochemistry professor, and Mrs. Robert Lagemann, wife of physics professor Robert Lagemann.

E. H. Rice, dean of students, will appear in "Heartbreak House," the next Players production.

Collazo Calm on Eve of Trial

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—(AP). Oscar Collazo, fanatical Puerto Rican revolutionary, waited calmly in a jail cell Sunday on the eve of his trial on charges of murdering a White House guard and trying to assassinate President Truman.

The dark, slightly built, 27-year-old defendant faces death in the electric chair if he is found guilty of taking part in the assassination attempt which was broken up in a wild shooting affray on the steps of the President's Blair House residence last Nov. 1. White House Guard Leslie Coffelt and Collazo's accomplice, Grisello Torresola, died in the gun battle.

The trial, which begins Monday morning before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, may be a long one. Government prosecutors have lined up 150 potential witnesses, and plan to call at least 40.

Defense attorneys appointed by the court to represent the penniless Collazo have not announced their plans. They may enter a plea of temporary insanity.

Collazo has pleaded innocent—the only plea U. S. courts will accept from a man charged with murder. But he readily admitted to authorities at the time of his arrest that he and Torresola came to Washington "with the express purpose of shooting the President."

Under Federal law, the Government does not have to prove that Collazo premeditated the murder of Coffelt. The prosecution already has announced that FBI ballistics tests show the bullet which killed Coffelt came from Torresola's gun.

The indictment against Collazo is based on a law which provides for first-degree murder charges against anyone who takes part in a crime in which a person is killed. Thus the Government's case will be built around an attempt to show that Collazo planned and took part in a murderous attempt at "armed house-breaking."

The fact that the house was the President's residence is set down in the indictment but from a purely legal standpoint that is incidental. It is no greater crime under U. S. law to try to kill the President than anyone else.

Ochlochnee's New Baptist Church Opens

By CHARLES SKINNER

OCHLOCHNEE, Feb. 25.—A handsome new Baptist church of 203 members in a Thomas County community of only 500 persons was officially opened here Sunday.

And the members intend to provide a beacon light for a revitalized religion in rural Georgia.

They listened Sunday morning as their pastor said:

"We shall use this building to those tasks and aims in which the Christian serves his time and place; to the cause of missions, of Christian citizenship, and the broad field of social relations."

Then they joined him in voicing together:

"We commit ourselves anew to that service of our fellowmen wherein can best be performed our true service to God, in obedience to the spirit of the Master when He said: 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself.'"

Pastor J. Gorham Garrison said his people watched the consolidation of the school districts and the growth of the consolidated school in Ochlochnee.

"The moving of the little one-room school seemed to take something away from those little communities. We thought our church should try to consolidate and take care of the religious needs of the people in our consolidated school district," the Rev. Mr. Garrison said.

And with the aggressive leadership of the Rev. Mr. Garrison, they built their church here. They built a beautiful brick structure, big and enduring, as solid as their faith. And Sunday they observed their "Achievement Day."

Ochlochnee Baptist Church—

"The church in the heart of the community with the community at heart"—has a story to tell. And you can't write a paragraph of that story without including the Rev. Mr. Garrison.

He is in his 24th year as pastor of the church. When he came to Ochlochnee in 1921, he found a one-room church building. With his people, he has nurtured that one-room building into a magnificent church.

Once a month, the Rev. Mr. Garrison writes, edits and publishes for his church "The Baptist Builder," a magazine aimed primarily at Ochlochnee members but read by Baptists over the state.

The pastor's powerful, energetic personality literally radiates from the pages.

In one issue, he printed a note from a man who had been asked to make a donation toward the new church.

The note read: "Dear Sir: I don't believe in this kind of begging."

And the editor's answer: "The writer of that note, a very wealthy man, has since gone on to his eternal reward. I had rather be a beggar for the Lord than to be a spendthrift for the devil."

The Rev. Mr. Garrison's own pithy "Sentence Sermons" are hard-core and full of wisdom.

For example:

"Remember that God never blesses laziness."

This is the country preacher who, among other things, has for 36 years been a teacher, principal and superintendent in Thomas County schools, and who is past district governor of Lions International, former superintendent of Thomas Business College, and former president of the Thomasville Kiwanis Club.

The Rev. Mr. Garrison is a member of the board of trustees of Norman Junior College, president of the Georgia High School Association, vice chairman of the Georgia Accrediting Commission, a director of the Georgia Education Association, member of the executive committee of the National Debating Council and an international councillor of Lions International.

With such a membership, with such a faith, with such a pastor, they intend to point the way to a stronger religion in rural Georgia.

"What we can do, others can also do," the Rev. Mr. Garrison says.

Peace of the Redeemed Discussed by Pastor

"Will I recognize my loved ones in heaven?" This question is asked frequently by listeners on "The Pastor's Study," a radio program of the Atlanta Christian Council.

This sermon, preached in answer to it, is one of a series which will appear in the Monday Morning Pulpit, each of which will reply to a similar actual question. "The Pastor's Study," where a pastor talks with listeners about their questions, can be heard every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 11:30 p. m. over radio station WSB.

By DON ADERHOLD

Pastor, Columbia Drive Baptist Church

Text: Matt. 22:30—"For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven."

Will I recognize my loved ones in heaven, and if so, what will our relationship be? This and other questions have been asked countless times by inquiring people concerning our relationships in heaven.

We can find what the Bible teaches on this subject in Matt. 22:23-33, which is a record of a conversation between Christ and the Sadducees. The Sadducees, who contended that there was no resurrection, confronted Jesus with the problem of whose wife a certain woman, who had been married seven times on earth, would be in the resurrection. Since she had been lawfully married each of these times, they assumed this would only bring confusion in the next life if there should be such a thing as a resurrection. From the answer the Lord gives to these men we learn some of the great Christian doctrines on this issue.

First, we learn the Lord believed and taught the resurrection of the body. This great doctrine has been defended by the church through the centuries.

Christ claimed the Sadducees erred, not knowing the Scriptures or the power of God, when they said there was no resurrection. God is able to raise the body by His power, and the Scriptures teach us this will be done.

The Scriptures quote God as saying, "I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," long after these men were dead. "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." The Apostle Paul went so far as to declare that, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised."

Secondly, we can surmise from this conversation that the resurrected bodies will be recognized and known. The very fact of the resurrection infers this truth. The Apostle Paul agrees that the resurrection of Christ is a basis of hope for our own resurrection.

Since the Scriptures plainly indicate that the Risen Christ was capable of distinguishing and recognizing those about Him, then we can rest in the assurance that we will know our loved ones in heaven. Paul wrote an epistle to the Thessalonian Church comforting them in the hope they would see their loved ones again (1 Thessalonians 3:13-15). This is distinctly a Christian hope.

Thirdly, this conversation teaches us that earthly relationships will not exist in heaven. We will know those about us but the relationship of husband and wife, etc., will not exist in the manner in which it exists here on earth.

Here on earth we have need of marriage and the home for the perpetuation of the human race, but in heaven there will be no such need. Since there will be no more deaths, there need be no more births. The earthly institution of marriage will be swallowed up in the spiritual marriage of all the redeemed to Christ.

It is difficult for us to conceive of not loving those closest to us more than all others, yet this will be the case. It is not a question of loving our loved ones less, but rather of loving others more. This is the ideal state—yes, this is heaven.

The joy and the peace of the redeemed will be complete throughout all eternity. The redeemed with spiritual and incorruptible bodies will forever worship God.

The Apostle John describes it in the following manner: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." (Rev. 21:4.)

104TH BIRTHDAY

'Aunt Sadie' Is Oldest Atlantan

Atlanta's oldest citizen celebrated her 104th birthday Sunday and had "a wonderful time" greeting more than 100 relatives and old friends from Atlanta and Georgia towns.

Guests who flowed in all day to see Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Parker at 691 Evelyn Pl., N. W., were served ice cream with pieces of a huge but "beautiful" birthday cake, according to Mrs. D. S. Beattie, a daughter with whom the elderly woman lives.

Mrs. Beattie said her mother was particularly happy at seeing many old friends from Rockmart and Douglasville—former homes of the Taylorsville native, married in 1865 after the War Between the States. Mrs. Parker's husband has been dead for many years.

Known to many friends simply as "Aunt Sadie," Mrs. Parker has two living children—Mrs. Beattie and J. E. Parker—nine grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. She was the mother of 11 children.

It was an exciting day for Mrs. Parker, who except for failing eyesight and hearing, is in excellent health, Mrs. Beattie reported.

"Why, it was nearly 9 p. m. before she went to bed," the daughter added.

Newton Lauds Martha Berry At Memorial

More than 400 alumni were in the throng attending the Second Martha Berry Memorial Service at the Druid Hills Baptist Church Sunday in honor of the woman who founded a school for underprivileged children that has grown to more than 125 buildings and 35,000 acres.

Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist Church, termed her the "greatest woman Georgia has given the world," and told of seeing her in 1913 with the same horse and buggy the mountain people remembered her by. He said that he hoped the Alumni and friends of the school would celebrate next year, the 50th anniversary of the school, by making a special contribution in tribute to "what she has given the State of Georgia."

Mrs. Inez Woolen, who was Miss Berry's personal secretary for 25 years, and whom Miss Berry referred to as her "right hand," gave a biographical sketch of the woman and the growth of the school.

Judge Eugene Gunby told how Miss Berry's example had influenced the boys and girls she had taught.

Committeeships Asked for GOPs

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—(INS)—House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin announced Sunday he will introduce a resolution demanding that Republicans be given more representation on committees.

Martin said the numerical inferiority of Republicans on congressional committees was a "shocking and unprecedented state of affairs."

He said the Republicans have a 46 per cent membership in the house, but only 29 per cent representation on two committees and 33 per cent on two others.

The GOP leader charged the appropriations committee chairman had "cut down" republican strength on the four committees.

State's Churchfolk Rated Among Best

By THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

We Georgia churchfolk who have reached the age of accountability and know what we are talking about will readily recognize and admit that religion in Georgia is not by any measure all that it should be, or might be.

But, comparing our 48 states, our religion in Georgia measures up with that of any other commonwealth, and surpasses that of many. We may be barometered ignoramus in the eyes of some, but our record as to religion is not to be scoffed at. Our pioneers in Georgia religion may have been persecuted and put in jail, but not so today, for most Georgians take religion seriously and have a faith in the Eternal that is a solid foundation for our way of living.

It is quite true we do have defects and blemishes, but we seldom ever hear of heresy trials in Georgia, and seldom do there come super-sensational scandals among our church people.

Without owning a foot of land or other properties, we made our start in the face of opposition. Today religion in Georgia owns billions of dollars' worth of property, with an increase of more than $100,000,000 each year. At the same time we Georgia churchfolk are putting on God's altar month by month, $2,000,000 in support of His work among men.

Year by year, our numbers in members increase some 50,000 souls by confession of faith. Religion in Georgia is not dead, nor is it going to die. Man for man, church for church, Georgia rates all right with any other state. In our evangelical and evangelistic religion, our "Bible Belt State" has the opportunity and call to yet greater achievements and attainments. Let's go.

Dr. Long's Sermon
Several times has this reporter heard Dr. Nat. G. Long, of the Peachtree Road Methodist Church, preach. His discourses always are well prepared, and are heard by large congregations. The most helpful and satisfactory sermon the reporter has heard Dr. Long deliver recently was given when "Hope in Times of Trouble and Perplexity" was the subject studied.

Scripture basis for the sermon is found in the entire First Epistle of St. Peter, wherein Dr. Long explained texts that assure help for believers in troublous times. For a believer to get this help, said Dr. Long, "he must put his whole trust in God, live a holy life in a negative and positive manner, have unfeigned love for the brotherhood, and accept suffering as a discipline."

The Holy Bible furnishes innumerable instances proving the fact that God is trustworthy and dependable, said Dr. Long. The discourse referred to doubtlessly brought comfort and inspiration to many others who heard it, furnishing substantial food for the inner man. Today Old Man People and his children tell me they crave kindly and assuring instructions in these perilous days from the depths of God's Bible.

Bible Manhandled
Since the days of the Garden of Eden, the word of God has been badly manhandled. Some of the manhandling took place in Georgia. Men not only shut their eyes and minds to what they do not want to see in God's word, but they deliberately make changes and substitute the words of men for what God says.

Roman emperor ordered every copy of the Scriptures destroyed, while later days bring forth the fact that, if God's Bible won't say what we want it to say, we'll just print a Bible of our own.

and make it say what we want it to say.

Jesus Christ pointed out the dangers and troubles that come from such a procedure, accompanied by the wrath of God.

Every trouble we have in the world today, and that goes for Georgia, is due to efforts made to disregard and change the words of God.

That Holy Bible, as God had it written, is the only sure thing we have today, and it will be the only book that will survive. Of course, we may be able to ignore a few red lights as we travel, but, sooner or later, there is a smash-up.

TIME AGES many things...but there's a "spirit" in the Southland that will never grow old!

It is as timeless as the courage and vision that enabled the war-ravaged South of 1865...alone and unaided...to lift itself "by its own bootstraps" out of the depths of destruction and despair.

It is as ageless as the optimism and faith with which the self-reliant, progressive men and women of the South today are building toward an even greater Southland.

Without this spirit, the South could never have grown up. And with it, our beloved Southland will never stop growing.

Proudly we say, "The Southern Serves the South," because we are proud of the South we serve.

Communists Gird for Court Ruling

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (U.P.)—The Communist Party served notice Sunday that it would challenge any decision by the Supreme Court upholding the conviction of 11 top Communist leaders by carrying "the fight to the people" and making it a "worldwide issue."

The high court may rule Monday.

A party spokesman implied the possibility of nationwide mass meetings, demonstrations and international protests in saying that a ruling against the communists would be a "worldwide issue."

The spokesman declined to speculate on the decision which the Supreme Court may hand down Monday. A flood of opinion is expected from the high court which has been considering the appeal of the Communists convicted of violating the Smith Act by conspiring to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the government.

POLICE BLOTTER

Two Atlanta policemen Sunday swapped their badges for spurs temporarily and staged a real western rodeo. P. S. A. Best and V. G. Sloan tracked a runaway cow that had been filched from the barn of R. L. Pain, 561 North Avenue, by rustlers. The cow was located about a mile from the Pain barn. The animal was tied to a tree. Mrs. Pain said she milked the cow Saturday night, put the animal in its stall and locked the barn door. It was gone Sunday morning and the uniformed cowboys were called to the roundup.

Burglars Get $175

Burglars smashed a side window in the office of the Mack Truck Corporation 780 Memorial Dr., S. E., early Sunday and removed $175 from a cash box in the building. . . . Vandalism was blamed for a reported burglary at the Home Park School at State St., and Home Park Ave., N. W., police said. The intruders only ransacked the teachers' desks. Nothing apparently was taken.

Tire Theft Suspected

Two men were jailed early Sunday on suspicion of larceny charges in connection with the theft of several new tires. The men, identified as Junior Ruben Cochran, 22, of 733 Capitol Ave., S. E., and Wilbur H. Norton, 25, of Stonewall, were arrested by P. L. C. Williams and L. S. West in a service station at Capitol Ave. and Ormond St. The officers said the men were rolling a tire off a truck away from a truck parked in the station. Four more tires were found in the men's auto nearby, the officers said.

Admiral Concludes Talks With Chiang

TAIPEI, Formosa, Feb. 25 (U.P.)—U. S. Vice Adm. Arthur D. Struble left Sunday to rejoin his Seventh Fleet in Korean waters after four days of conferences with Chiang Kai-Shek and other top Chinese Nationalists.

The talks presumably dealt with defense of Formosa and Nationalist military needs.

There was one report the Nationalists renewed their offer to send troops to Korea but were told again they could be more useful where they are. The position of Nationalist guerrillas on the mainland and what they would need to become more effective was another subject believed to have been discussed.

PRAYER ANSWERED

Girl Polio Victim, 6, Can Wiggle Toes

By WILLIAM PEART
TULSA, Okla., Feb. 25 (U.P.)—Benna Kay Kime threw God a kiss.

"Oh, mama," Benna Kay, who is just six and a polio victim for four years, cried Saturday night. "I can wiggle my toes. That's what I've always said my prayers for. I've asked God to make me walk again. I've never said it loud before. But now I can."

Then the child, blue-eyed and with her cumbersome leg braces off, crawled slowly over to her mother—Mrs. Carl V. Kime, Sr.—and added excitedly:

"Can I kiss you, mama, because I am so happy. Maybe God will let me walk again. I guess I had better throw Him a kiss, too."

And Benna Kay Kime did. It's only a little thing, a child faintly wiggling her toes, but it's big and important to Mr. and Mrs. Kime, who were told she never would.

"It's really a miracle," Kime, principal at the nearby Sperry High School, said Sunday. "And it's given us hope. We had resigned ourselves to her condition. But now we do have a definite hope. She's not counted out yet."

Benna Kay was watching a television program Saturday night when she discovered she could just move the toes on her right foot.

Mrs. Kime started crying when her daughter—she has two other children, Carl, Jr., 2, and Diana Sue, 7—repeated the slight twitching.

"Why are you crying, mama?" she asked with a child's innocence. "I'm crying darling," she answered, "because I am so happy."

"Do you think we ought to put it in the paper, mama?" Benna Kay said, "then everybody can be happy."

Kime said yes. If she wanted to.

"All right, mama," she said, "we will. Then other little boys and girls who have had polio can be happy, too, and have some hope."

What, Mrs. Kime asked, "do you want to say?"

And Benna Kay, paralyzed from the waist down, said:

"Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kime's daughter, Benna Kay, has had polio, but now she can wiggle her toes."

ALERT SLEUTHS

Car Looting Nailed on Spot

A Negro man who told police he "broke into so many cars I lost count" was lodged in City Jail Sunday as result of some eagle-eye sleuthing by a couple of Atlanta detectives.

Lt. J. L. Tuggle and Detective R. E. Finley said they nabbed the Negro on Ivy Street, N. E., between Harris and Cain Streets, when he returned to an auto for a second load of loot.

The man, identified as Ferman Cosley, 43, of 48 Howell St., S. E., Officers said the arrest will clear up at least 12 larceny from automobile cases reported in recent weeks.

Lt. Tuggle and Finley said they passed a car Saturday night and noticed it had been entered. An inspection revealed an intruder had taken something from the machine but had left a considerable quantity of clothing behind.

Acting on a hunch that the man would return, the officers hid themselves and watched.

Cosley returned within a few minutes and went back to work, the officers related Sunday.

Arrested and brought to police headquarters, Cosley made a statement in which he confessed to stealing at least one car a week for the past eight months. Most of the cars entered were parked in the downtown section. Cosley, in his statement, told of selling men's and women's clothing taken from cars to pawn shops.

Cosley is booked on charges of disorderly conduct—larceny from automobiles. He will be tried Monday in Police Court.

The ancient Indians in the southwestern part of what is now the United States built the first American apartment houses, some of them containing 1,200 rooms.

DeGaulle Says Send GIs or Reds Invade

BOURGIES, France, Feb. 25 (U.P.)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle warned Sunday that American refusal to send more troops to Europe would "condemn Europe to invasion."

Speaking to about 5,000 persons here on the 35th anniversary of the historic battle of Verdun, De Gaulle said commitment of U. S. air and sea forces alone would not be sufficient to defend Western Europe against a Russian attack.

"Before the Soviets," he added, "the solidarity of the new and the old world is the rule of health for both. I would ask the Americans to have no illusions. If Europe is lost, what remains in Asia would be untenable."

"Then," he asked, "what would become of the United States, alone against a vast array of hostile forces?"

DeGaulle, the leader of Free French forces in World War II and political head of the powerful Rally of the French People (RPF), said that "in the camp of the free, two obstacles must be conquered—America's remoteness and the weakness of the French regime."

About 600 Communists attended another meeting nearby.

as well as, in all probability, by newly equipped East German "Beretschka" units.

High officials of the West German government told this writer recently in Bonn that "Beretschka" formations were already in the process of being shifted to Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Concurrently there are new reports that a significant amount of war material from the Soviet Union, including tanks, anti-aircraft guns, anti-tank artillery and field artillery have been sent to Poland where it is believed Rokossovski is now in the process of creating a Polish armored force, probably corps.

In Southeastern Europe "creeping" mobilization among Soviet satellites persists. It is estimated that the Bulgarian army now has 500 Russian tanks, about a 25 percent increase over the November figure.

to see a group of "distinguished Americans" gather to exchange views on the best means to counter the threat of Communism.

"Communism may no longer intelligently be discussed as an economic, political or social philosophy," the message asserted. "Instead, upon the shallow pretense of human betterment, it has become a means to satisfy a lust for personal power. Freedom has become its very antithesis. For Communism cannot survive in an atmosphere of freedom. Being a struggle for minority rule over the majority it can only gain and hold power through terrorism, subversion and deceit. To secure its purpose it must subdue the soul of man and bring his mind under the paralysis of mortal fear. Thereby it gains its unwilling converts."

Communism plans for world conquest, he said, had challenged freedom on the battlefields of Asia and there they must be decisively defeated, adding:

"Otherwise, all of Asia will fall to Communism and with it Communism will gain all of the requirements to the building of a war-making potential without parallel in history."

NOTE

ever in Moscow that any protracted stalemate in drafting a foreign ministers' agenda is not likely. These conclusions arose from the following points made by the new Russian note:

First, for the first time in post-war exchanges the Soviet government stated the present size of its army, navy and air force, placing this figure in the neighborhood of 2,500,000, or, as the note specified, less than half the armed forces of the United States, Britain and France which were estimated at more than 5,000,000.

Secondly, Russia expressed its preparedness to enter bilateral negotiations with Britain for the purpose of utilizing "all possibilities for improvement of relations," although it added that it lacked "full confidence" in the desire of Britain for better relations.

Thirdly, the Soviet Union, while absolving itself of responsibility for delay in an Austrian treaty, declared it was time to end the prolonged study of treaty articles, intimating it was time to conclude an Austrian pact.

Fourthly, the Soviet disclaimed responsibility for the so-called national liberation movements in Asia, which it called "as ridiculous as to accuse it of earthquakes, tides and floods," and made plain that it would continue to extend sympathy to these movements.

Fifthly, the note declared flatly that the Soviet people have and will continue to attack the present Yugoslav regime, which was described as "like the Franco regime in Spain."

While the most immediate interest in Moscow was attracted by the statement on Soviet military forces, the general impression which the note gave was one of great willingness on the part of the Soviet Union to enter into discussion of broad aspects of the question of armaments and disarmament. These are subjects which have not previously been given much attention, either in the exchange of Soviet and Western notes on the Foreign Ministers' Conference or in the separate exchange between the Soviet and American Presses on the question of the alliances.

It was noted here that the overall estimate of Soviet armed forces in the neighborhood of 2,500,000 is materially lower than estimates which have received currency in the West. In recent congressional estimates of 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 have been used for Soviet land forces, and a total of approximately 4,000,000 for land, sea and air. The figure contained in the note to London is not only less than half the combined Anglo-American-Polish forces, but is considerably below the United States' own target goal for next July 1.

Another interesting declaration in the note was the statement that 33 age groups have been demobilized in the postwar reduction of Soviet forces. The note estimated the present size of Soviet forces as that of 1939, whereas, the Western forces were several times their 1939 level.

The note charged the "double superiority" of western forces was designed, not against revived militarism in Germany or Japan, but mainly against the Soviet Union.

Thus the note considerably amplified the more general declaration given a week ago by Generalissimo Joseph Stalin with regard to Soviet demobilization. It also bore out suggestions that the Soviet would utilize all possible opportunities to develop, expand and press home its thesis that the real threat to peace comes from the west and that the Soviet Union is firmly dedicated to a policy of peaceful resolution of world tensions.

In line with that policy, it was regarded entirely likely that Andrei V. Vishinsky would sit down with the three western foreign ministers, not only prepared to discuss all issues of tension which anyone desires to talk over but would come to the conference with specific proposals for coping with these matters.

Of the broad range of subjects raised in the most recent British note to Moscow, the Soviet reply touched on practically all of them. It could not be said that the latest British-Soviet exchange indicated any great measure of agreement on responsibility for today's conditions, but the note left a considerable impression on a Soviet desire for frank thrashing out of these problems in line with its final words, which were "the USSR government will value highly any step of the British govern-

Negro Garage Found Afire In Disputed Area

Police Sunday reported felling two attempts to turn garages in an East Avenue section where Negro ownership of a home is being protested by white residents of the area.

P. L. C. Kennon and S. S. Howie discovered both fires within seconds of the time they allegedly were set and extinguished them without heavy damage.

According to a report filed by the officers, the first fire which had started eating into the side of a garage behind a white residence at 524 East Ave. was put out without much damage. The officers said the building had been saturated with kerosene and piles of trash had been heaped against the building.

About half-hour later the officers returned to the scene on a hunch. When the officers reached a Negro home at 518 East Ave. they saw flames leap up from a garage in the rear of the house. A handy garden hose provided water to extinguish the second fire. Again the officers reported the building had been saturated with kerosene.

Kennon and Howie said 518 East Ave. is occupied by white by a Negro family. All other houses in the section are occupied by white families, they said.

The White Citizens Committee Friday night held a public meeting at which a petition was circulated requesting the Negro to move from 518 East Ave. The committee said at the time that the attempt to have the Negro move will be handled "in a legal and manly way."

A spokesman for the committee Sunday night said he had not heard of the fires.

to a halt while farther west Canadians and British troops halted their advance when they ran into two enemy battalions. The commonwealth troops pulled back to let air and artillery work them over.

But elsewhere resistance was collapsing as the Communists raced for the roadless mountain stronghold above the Hoengsong-Pyongyang line—an area of caves and gullies and steep slopes which UN forces have never penetrated.

A tank-led American unit crashed into Hoengsong for the second time in two days against little opposition and withdrew after finding the Communists had withdrawn to the north and established rearward defenses to protect their retreat from the Allied advance.

GOPs Council To Meet Here

The recently organized Southern Council of Young Republicans will meet in Atlanta sometime in April, Cecil Hartness, of Blue Ridge, a national committeeman from Georgia of the Young Republicans Federation, announced Sunday.

Hartness, who with William J. Folsom, Jr., of Atlanta, state chairman of the Georgia Federation of Young Republicans, has just returned from Young Republican meetings in Washington, said the executive committee of the Southern Council accepted his invitation to meet here.

He said the exact date had not been set nor the program arranged. The Southern Council is a group within the National Young Republican organization.

Hartness revealed plans of the Young Republicans of Georgia to continue an expansion program and reactivate existing clubs. He said the group was planning an educational program for young persons aimed at pointing out the values of the two-party system of government and was hoping to establish Young Republican clubs in colleges of the state.

By CLAUDE GEORGE, SR.

The Atlanta branch of the National Negro Business League has for its purpose in the near future the lifting of the horizon of Negro businesses here.

He aims to list every person doing business in the city as a member of the league. "More business and better business," say the officials, will be their motto.

"Problems of business will be taken to the churches and the schools of the city and explained," Richard Perry on Felton Drive, Turkey, are having for our first objective the improvement of the business section of Auburn Avenue and the business section of West Hunter.

Newly elected officers of the Atlanta Branch are J. L. Wolfe, president; Menelice Jackson, first vice president; Rogers Henderson, president emeritus; C. A. Scott, sectional vice president; R. O. Sutton, Northeast section; Willie Menefee and Ruby Blackburn, Westside section; Ted Lewis, Pittsburgh; George Andrews, South Atlanta section; R. L. Andrews, M. Thornton; Jesse Hill, executive secretary; Jacob Henderson, corresponding secretary; E. L. Wright, treasurer; W. H. Aiken, executive committee chairman; Mrs. M. D. Bowen, executive committee vice chairman; Mrs. Geneva Haugbrooks, chairman; Mrs. Rogers Henderson, parliamentarian; C. T. Perkins, director of public relations; T. M. Alexander, Mrs. Ella Martin, Mrs. Mattie Bennett, J. H. Calhoun, J. B. Blayton.

The league will sponsor a luncheon at noon Wednesday at the Atlanta Hungry Club.

Red Cross Tour

Jesse O. Thomas, public relations consultant for the American Red Cross, has been touring the Southern states during February contacting insurance executives and college executives. Purpose of his trip is to acquaint organizations with the information on what to do in time of disaster. Thomas said that he has addressed several college classes on the national Red Cross program. He is winding up his tour in Atlanta. Thomas was formerly connected with the Urban League as Southern director and still maintains his home in Atlanta.

The Atlanta branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People membership committee met recently at the Boys' clubhouse on Butler Street. J. H. Calhoun, chairman, outlined a membership campaign beginning on March 15 and extending through April 2. Sectional leaders were selected to organize the city and the surrounding territories. Prof. C. L. Harper, president of the Atlanta branch, stated that a goal of 10,000 more members has been set.

Night Sunday School

The Big Bethel A. M. E. Church conducted night Sunday School recently for the second time.

The Sunday School lesson was opened with an invocation by Hoover Adams. Jesse Hill, Jr., introduced the guest superintendent, J. H. Calhoun, who said in his opening remarks, "We are trying to help those people who have to work on Sunday mornings and do not have the opportunity to attend the regular Sunday School in the mornings."

Several churches of various deominations participated in the discussion of the Sunday School lesson. In the absence of the Rev. D. V. Kyle, who was attending the bishops' conference, the Sunday School lesson was reviewed by Dr. Lawrence E. Boyd of Morris Brown College. Benediction was delivered by the Rev. E. C. Brown.

Mothers' Club Fete

A Hungry Club luncheon meeting was held recently in observance of National Press Week. H. S. Murphy presided in the absence of President Moez Hill. The guest speaker was William Gordon, managing editor of the Atlanta Daily World, who used as subject for his discussion "Opportunity in the Negro Press." He said the Negro press is a fertile field for students who would like to advance in the field of journalism. After the address, the meeting went into an open forum discussion on the Negro press.

A group of students from David T. Howard School who are interested in journalism was present and journalism students from Morehouse College also were present. Out-of-town visitors present included Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Thomas, from Mount Bayou, Miss. and Mrs. C. E. Faulkner, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Mamie Bullard, Chicago, Ill.; Dr. David J. Seal, New Orleans, La., and Mrs. Malinda O'Neal. Jose Annias represented Morehouse College and David Solomon represented David T. Howard School.

Dr. Anne M. Cooke, professor of drama at Howard University, will address a joint Atlanta-Morehouse-Spelman convocation at 11 a. m. Thursday in Sisters Chapel on the campus of Spelman College. Her subject will be "Shakespeare on the Modern Stage."

Dr. Cooke's return to Atlanta, where she organized the University Players and the Atlanta University Summer Theater, has been timed to coincide with the performances of the Shakespearean comedy, "The Tempest," by the University Players, March 1-3, for the benefit of the Spelman College gymnasium fund. Harrison's Violin Sparks Atlanta Symphony Concert

By HOWELL JONES

Violinist Robert Harrison stepped to the footlights two weeks earlier than scheduled Sunday to appear as soloist with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra in the eighth subscription concert of the season at the Municipal Auditorium.

Harrison, concertmaster of the orchestra and Atlanta's top violinist, moved his appearance up two weeks to fill a spot left open by the postponement of Oscar Levant's date here. He won a ringing ovation from a medium-sized audience for his interpretation of the extremely difficult "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra," by Kachaturian.

There's no doubt that Harrison

Dallas Man Is Jailed In Slaying

Constitution Staff Photo—Floyd Johnson

ROME, Feb. 25—A man who police said had threatened to kill Johnson Burrey Garrett, 23, of Lindale, "if he doesn't stay away from my wife," claimed Sunday he shot and killed Garrett in self-defense.

He was identified by Floyd County Sheriff Gilmore Johnson as LeRoy Jack Hulsey, 27, of Dallas.

Sheriff Johnson said Garrett was shot in the stomach Saturday night with a .32-caliber revolver and was pronounced dead on arrival at a Rome hospital. The shooting took place in a residence on Railroad Street in Lindale, textile village near Rome, where Hulsey's estranged wife was living, the Sheriff said.

Hulsey and his wife were getting a divorce, Sheriff Johnson said. He quoted Mrs. Hulsey as saying Hulsey had threatened to kill Garrett "if he keeps going out with you."

Garrett and Hulsey both showed up at the Railroad Street house Saturday night, according to the Sheriff's report, and the shooting took place soon after they arrived. Sheriff Johnson said Garrett, who had been sought by police since the shooting, was being held in the Floyd County Jail on a charge of murder after surrendering to Trooper Luther Butler and a deputy sheriff in Paulding County Sunday afternoon.

Sheriff Johnson quoted Hulsey as saying Garrett attacked him and he shot him in self-defense.

Sheriff Johnson said the confessed slayer received treatment at a Marietta hospital for cuts on the face and neck.

The Floyd County sheriff listed as witnesses Jimmy and Luther Ely, brothers of Mrs. Hulsey, and Bonnie Burkhalter.

Marker Rites For Longstreet

EDGEFIELD, S. C., Feb. 25—(AP) The memory of a South Carolina hero of the confederacy, Gen. James Longstreet, will be honored near here Friday.

His widow, Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet, about 90, of Marietta, Ga., plans to attend ceremonies unveiling markers.

Gen. Charles Summerall, former Army Chief of Staff and now President of the Citadel College in Charleston, will speak at ceremonies arranged by the Edgefield Historical society.

The ceremonies will be held on the Martintown road where a large marker will be unveiled, and at the nearby actual birthplace, where a smaller marker will be placed.

A group of young women wearing costumes of the 1860's will attend Mrs. Longstreet.

IT COSTS TWICE AS MUCH TO DRIVE A CAR TODAY AS IT DID 10 YEARS AGO

Fleet-car owners—thriftiest of all car operators—say it costs twice as much to drive a car today as it did 10 years ago. Six cents a mile compared with three!

It probably costs you more, because everything they buy—from automobiles to repair parts—are bought at lower prices than you pay.

But even at six cents a mile—if you live five miles from town, it costs a good $1.00 to make the round trip, including parking at 40 cents.

Simple arithmetic will tell you that, in this case, you can save 80% by riding a bus or trolley.

The next time you drive to town, check your mileage and parking costs and see how much you can save.

OUR COSTS HAVE DOUBLED, TOO!

Just as your costs have gone up, so have ours. Today it costs twice as much to operate buses and trolleys as it did 10 years ago.

Since June, 1950—when the Korean War started and we bought Atlanta's transportation system—prices for nearly everything we buy have shot up. Tires are up 26%. Repair parts are up 10%. Copper wire is up 25%. Rubber is up 188%. Cotton 22%. All since June, 1950.

This makes your trolley ride a bigger bargain than ever

You can still ride a bus or trolley for the same 10-cent cash fare that you paid in 1940. Tokens and other fares are the same as they were almost two years ago.

With the cost of driving a car double what it was 10 years ago, your bus or trolley ride is a bigger bargain than ever.

Splinters Shower Children As Plane Crashes Nearby

CLARK TOWNSHIP, N. J., Feb. 25—(AP)—A small plane swooped into a raised play platform Sunday, showering a nearby group of frightened children with wooden debris.

Seven boys and girls were treated for cuts, bruises and contusions and remained at their homes.

Police said the plane, which was taking off from the Westfield airport, was about 50 feet in the air when it suddenly dropped. Its left wing hit the play platform near a group of homes in a development, police said.

The top of the play platform was sheared off. None of the children was on the platform at the time.

Police said the pilot, Fred Bross, 26, of Cranford, told them he swerved the plane to avoid hitting the houses. Bross and a student pilot, Alfred Sanderson, 29, of Metuchen, were unhurt.

They ran to the aid of the children, and took them into nearby homes, where the kiddies were treated by Dr. Joseph Palin, of Winfield.

Police said no charges were made against the pilot, but an investigation would be conducted.

Clark Township is adjacent to Rahway, in central New Jersey.

Ozark Hills Slaying Jails Women, Man

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 25—(AP)—Two women and a man are in jail here on first-degree murder charges in connection with the weird slaying of the husband of one of the women in the wild Ozark hills of Southern Missouri.

Prosecuting Attorney H. F. Owens Jr. said that strange affair involved three cows, a $600 mortgage, a suit over a farm and a criminal case of attempted rape.

The victim was Charles Cobb, 65-year-old farmer who was found beaten to death in his barn last Tuesday.

Arrested Saturday and brought here for safekeeping were Cobb's wife, Ruby, 25; a neighbor, Mrs. Orma Clark, 32; and Mrs. Clark's hired man, Clarence Wood, 65. They live 50 miles southeast of Springfield, near the Arkansas border.

Owens said the young widow had made a statement accusing Mrs. Clark of plotting the murder and Wood of carrying it out.

Owens said Mrs. Cobb, in her statement, declared: "Cobb was to have been an important witness against Mrs. Clark in a civil suit involving ownership of a farm she claimed."

The middle-aged farmer also was to have been a witness in an attempted rape charge filed on his young wife's complaint against a neighbor, Orville Meredith.

Last month, Mrs. Clark told Mrs. Cobb that she had learned Cobb had decided to testify for Meredith in the criminal case and against his wife, but that for $600 she could have Cobb slain.

Mrs. Cobb said she told Mrs. Clark she did not have that much money and that Mrs. Clark agreed to accept a mortgage on three cows owned by the Cobbs "so I could pay it out on time."

The mortgage was executed and Cobb was found slain. The Cobbs were married in 1942 and were the parents of four children.

Wildcats Shatter Two SEC Records

Ruppmen Score 1,144 Points In Winning 14 Straight

By STERLING SLAPPEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Either Kentucky was better than ever this waning basketball season or the remainder of the Southeastern Conference was even weaker than usual.

But whichever is the case, the Wildcats made off with more glory in Southeastern regular season competition than any other team in history.

The 1950-51 edition of Coach Adolph Rupp's basketball handiwork, which possibly is the best Kentucky ever had, meets Mississippi State Thursday in the first round of the meaningless SEC basketball tournament in Louisville.

If the game goes according to form, Kentucky will score at least 100 points and State will score 50 or less.

Kentucky ended its season last week with easy victories over Georgia and Vanderbilt to become the first team in SEC history to win as many as 14 conference games without a loss. The pre-tense-packed 1948-49 team of Alex Groza, Ralph Beard, Wah Wah Jones and company, won 13 and lost none.

During the final week flurry Kentucky also pushed its season SEC scoring mark to 1,144 points to break Auburn's old record of 1,089. Center Bill Spivey, however, failed to break Alex Groza's total high scoring mark of 508 points in SEC games during 1948-49. Spivey scored 479 in his second consecutive conference scoring championship.

The 1950-51 crown is Kentucky's eighth in a row and thirteenth since the Southeastern was founded in 1933. Nine times Kentucky has been unbeaten in SEC games.

The Kentucky-State game is the final of the first night of the tournament. Starting time is 9:15 p. m. (CST). Other first-round games in the tournament will be Vanderbilt-Tennessee at 1:30 p. m.; Alabama-Mississippi at 3:15 p. m.; and Tulane-Florida at 7:30 p. m. Byes go to Georgia, LSU, Georgia Tech and Auburn.

Quarter-finals will be played Friday with Georgia playing the winner of the Vandy-Tennessee game; LSU meeting the Alabama-Mississippi winner; Georgia Tech playing the Tulane-Florida victor and Auburn taking on the Kentucky-State winner. Semifinals and finals are Saturday.

Two games remain in regular-season play but neither can alter pairings. Georgia goes to Nashville to play Vanderbilt Monday night to make up a game postponed by unpendable lights and bad weather earlier in the season. Mississippi State ends the season in Oxford against Mississippi Monday night.

UNION SPRINGS, Ala., Feb. 25. (P)—Ginnie Sue, white and black ticked setter bitch, Sunday won the National Shooting Dog Field Trials at the Maytag Plantation near here.

Rugby Player Loses His Pants

LONDON, Feb. 25. (P)—Fifty thousand spectators and untold thousands of television viewers watching an International Rugby match Sunday between England and France gasped.

France won the game, 11 to 3.

Roman, Gard Testify Today In 'Fix' Probe

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. (INS)—Big Ed Roman, towering City College of New York center, and little Ed Gard, former Long Island University star, are scheduled to be the first witnesses Monday before the New York grand jury investigating the week-old basketball scandal.

Roman and Gard are two of the eight New York area cage stars arrested with Salvatore Sollazzo, accused arch-fixer in the worst college sports scandal in history.

Gard is the confessed "middle man" who paid money to City College and LIU players to "throw" games both this season and last.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent O'Connor said he will question Roman and Gard briefly before they appear before the grand jury. O'Connor said Roman will turn over to him $500, the final installment of the $3,000 he admitted receiving for throwing games.

Prep Coaches Nominate Brown as AA Favorite

Roy Rowlett's Brown High Rebels, unbeaten for two years in Region 3-AA play and winners of 20 out of 23 starts this year, and Benedictine's Region Two champs are the top choices of coaches to win championship honors in the State Class AA high school basketball tournament, according to The Constitution's poll of State AA coaches.

The meet, which will open with eight games at Bass and Brown gyms here Thursday before switching to Georgia Tech hardwood for the final three days, is regarded as the most wide open in many years. But Brown was given the nod in the poll of 19 coaches willing to express themselves on the issue.

Giving four points for first place selection, three for second, two for third and one for fourth, the Rebs ran up a total of 39 points.

The 22-point total amassed by Vic Nell's BC quintet is impressive in view of the fact that only one Region Two coach voted. Eleven of the other 14 quintets in the meet figured in the point totals as follows: Lanier 16 each, North Fulton 12, Russell 12, Rome 10, O'Keefe 9, Albany 7, Columbus 5, Smith 4, Roosevelt 3, Savannah High, Boys Catholic of Augusta and Savannah Commercial are other quintets that qualified.

Six picked Brown as top team. BC and West Fulton had three first-place votes each, Lanier two; Jordan, North Fulton, Albany, Russell and Rome one each. Sam Burke, GHSA secretary from Thomaston, met with tournament officials here Sunday and drew up pairings and went over other details.

The annual GIAA luncheon meeting, at which time the site for the 1952 tournament will be set, will be held at the Ansley Hotel at noon Friday. The yearly coaches' party will be held at the same place following Friday night's semifinals.

This is the final year of a three-year trial period for Atlanta as the possible permanent site for the State tourney. Attendance at this season's games will have bearing on the decision.

WEDNESDAY'S SCHEDULE
AT BROWN: 2:30 p. m.—O'Keefe (3-AA-2) vs. Savannah (2-AA-2); 4:00—Rome (2-AA-2) vs. West Fulton (4-AA-1); 7:30—Jordan (1-AA-2) vs. Commercial (2-AA-2); 9:00—North Fulton (4-AA-1) vs. Smith (3-AA-4).

Class A Tourney Field Set

Fields for boys and girls Class A state prep basketball tournaments took shape Sunday, although the pairings for boys play will not be definite until Region One and Three conclude playoff series.

Valdosta, last year's boys runner-up, and Cook High of Adel, meet Monday night for the Region One title. Both will appear in the State meet as they did a year ago. Canton and Athens will again represent Region Two, the Greensboro and the Trojans as runners-up. Newnan, which last year finished second in Region Four, won that Region this time. LaGrange was the runner-up.

Region Three still shows Hapeville, College Park and Northside in the running for the two spots. That meet resumes Monday night at Covington. Both boys and girls meets will be held in Atlanta March 7-9. Cook High, the defending girls champ, will be in the field again, but Summerville, which won the boys title last year, was eliminated in the opening round of Region Four play.

Girls brackets are complete. Here are the pairings for both:

BOYS
Newnan vs. Athens; Region Three runner-up vs. Valdosta-Cook winner; Region Three winner vs. Valdosta-Cook runner-up; LaGrange vs. Canton.

GIRLS
Cassville vs. Canton; Washington Seminary vs. Bailey; Druid Hills vs. Cook High; Summerville vs. Athens.

Button Takes Fourth Crown

MILAN, Italy, Feb. 25. (P)—America's Dick Button won his fourth straight world figure skating championship Sunday night with a dazzling exhibition that blanketed all opposition.

The 21-year-old Harvard University student from Englewood, N. J., outlasted ten challengers from six countries to give Uncle Sam his only victory in the world event at Milan's Ice Palace.

The United States made an unexpectedly spectacular showing in the men's division, furnishing four of the first five places. James Grogan, 19-year-old skater from Colorado Springs, Colo., gave an outstanding performance in Sunday's free skating competition to gain second place behind Button.

Hayes Alan Jenkins, of Akron, Ohio, finished fourth and Dudley Richards, U. S. Junior champion from Boston, was fifth.

Smith, Boone Win Trap, Skeet

Dr. Linton Smith, Richard Wilson and D. W. Boone took honors in Sunday's skeet and trapshoot at the Capitol Gun Club range.

Dr. Smith and Wilson scored 46x50 in the trapshoot and the doctor took the shoot-off, 22-21.

Boone took the skeet shoot with 46 out of 50.

Millikin's Scotty Steagall Sets Seven Records in One Game

DECATUR, Ill., Feb. 25. (P)—You name the record—chances are Scotty Steagall or the Millikin University basketball team owns it.

All Steagall did Saturday night was set seven Little Nine conference basketball records. The Millikin team set four and tied one.

New marks piled up at the drop of a basketball as Millikin clinched the Little Nine crown with a 104-66 victory over Augustana.

Steagall, top scorer among the nation's smaller colleges, poured in 50 points, bringing his total to 303 for 10 league games—an average of 30.3 a game.

Steagall's individual Little Nine marks: Most points scored one game, 58. Best per-game season average, 30.3. Most field goals one game, 19. Most free throws one season, 89. Most points in four years, 887. Most free throws one game, 21.

Team records held by Millikin: Highest score winning game, 104. Most combined points one game, 170. Most points one season, 800. Most free throws one game, 32. Tied own record of 36 field goals in one game.

BASEBALL BRIEFS

Hearn Flashes Form In First Practice Stint

SANFORD, Fla., Feb. 25. (UP)—Jim Hearn of Atlanta flashed the same form which enabled him to post the best earned-run average in the National League last season as he made his first 1951 appearance with the New York Giants Sunday in an intra-squad game.

Hearn, who has yet to sign his contract, yielded one hit and faced only seven batters in two innings.

The lanky right-hander was the surprise of the 1950 campaign after shifting to the Giants from St. Louis Cards. He had a 11-4 record and a sensational ERA of 2.49.

Another pitcher, Allen Gettel, was the slugging star of the game. Gettel slapped a homer with one on to provide the Freddy Fitzsimmons club a 3-2 victory over the Herman Franks.

Manager Leo Durocher employed seven hurlers in the regulation game.

MacPherson Jinxed

BRADENTON, Fla., (P)—Pitcher Harry MacPherson, up from Atlanta of the Southern Association last season where he had an 11-9 record, qualifies as the hard luck rookie of the Spring in the Boston Braves training camp.

MacPherson was injured by a line drive last week and Sunday he was one of nine players sidelined with the flu. First baseman Earl Torgeson, catcher Walker Cooper, Del Crandall and Walter Lindon and pitchers Jim Wilson, Bob Chipman, Norm Roy and Don Conley were others hit by the "bug."

Marion Optimistic

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 25. (P)—Freshman Manager Marty Marion labels this Spring's crop of recruits as the best the Redbirds have had since before World War II.

The Crackers from Atlanta had special praise for pitchers Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell, former Albany, Ga., hurler, and Bobby Tiefenauer, ex-Georgia-Alabama League ace. Marion says Mizell reminds him of Dizzy Dean more every day.

Slug Likes Brown

PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Feb. 25. (P)—Hector Harold Brown may become a regular relief hurler for the Chicago White Sox.

Manager Paul Richards, one-time Atlanta pilot, cast a fond eye at Brown as he hustled his hurlers through a sweating workout. Brown played for Richards at Seattle last season, winning 13 and losing the same.

Tribe Trips Yanks

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 25. (P)—Farm club players of the Cleveland Indians downed the fledglings of the New York Yankees, 8-6, in the first exhibition baseball game of the Spring.

Clint Weaver, first baseman for McAlester, Texas, and Bob Cerv, an outfielder with Kansas City, slugged long homers for the Yanks and Joe Rowell, Dayton, Ohio, first sacker, hit for the circuit for Cleveland.

Southern Field Trials Start Today

By BERT PRATHER

ALBANY, Feb. 25. (P)—A field of between 75 and 100 dogs will seek the four crowns to be decided in the annual Southern Amateur Field Trials opening here Monday morning.

The trials, which are under the sponsorship of the Southern Field Trial Club, will be run over the Elikonke Plantation, part of the famous Pineland Plantation located on Hardup Road near here.

Joe Rosenberg, president of the host club, said birds were plentiful on the course and he expected a very successful trial. Last year's competitors averaged contacting 22 coveys of Bobwhites per day.

The amateur all-age stake is first on the program and will be followed by the amateur derby, shooting dog stake and open puppy stake. The latter is the only event in which professionals will be permitted to handle.

Greenwood Bill, owned by H. M. Beattie of Decatur, is the defending champion in the all-age. The derby was captured by Jerry Achenbach's Willie Ford's Judy, but she has now graduated into the all-age class. John Grant, who owned Wildfire Plantation here, won the shooting dog stake with Scot of Wildfire. Doc, owned by B. McCall of Birmingham won the '50 puppy stake.

Judges for the trials are Dr. Coyle Moore of Tallahassee, Fla., and Leon Shiver of Comer, Ala. Dr. W. D. Martin, secretary of the host club, will assist. President Rosenberg in running off the trials.

Talbert Wins Indoor Title

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. (P)—Bill Talbert, a real veteran of the courts, Sunday won the National Indoor Tennis championship by defeating 26-year-old Straight Clark of Pasadena, Calif., 6-4, 6-8, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Nancy Chaffee of Ventura, Cal., won her second straight women's title with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Beverly Baker of Santa Monica, California.

Talbert, who won the championship in 1948, had far from an easy time of it. Clark, seeded No. 7, upset defending champion Don McNeill Saturday, and seemed in the mood for another form reversal at the outset.

Time and again in the first set, he sent winners from the net that had Talbert shaking his head. The games followed service until Talbert, playing a power game, managed to break in the 10th game.

The "big" game of Talbert's, in the long run was what won for him. Clark repeatedly tried to slow him down, and on occasion, was successful—especially in the second and third sets.

Coach Hurt

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 25. (P)—Will Walls, former professional football player with the New York Giants and recently football coach of the University of Corpus Christi, was critically injured early Sunday in an automobile accident.

Girls B, C Meets Begin Wednesday

Jasper, Baker County Cage Teams To Defend State Crowns

By JACK JACKSON

Both defending champions, two other former winners, a pair of undefeated teams and a full house of top sextets open fire at noon Wednesday at the Macon City Auditorium and after four busy days of basketball, Georgia's 1951 Class B and C girls' titles will be decided.

Class B Pickens County, of Jasper, returns to defend the title it won a year ago and brings with it the Ninth District championship and a 1950-51 string of 32 straight victories. Too, Baker County, of Newton, is back to protect its Class C title. Baker, likewise, is in a sense undefeated, although its record reads 26-1.

That lone loss came at the hands of Colquitt just before the district meets opened. Coach Bill Geer, of Baker, sought to have the game postponed or canceled because his girls were to begin tourney play just two days later. However, when that was impossible, he played reserves and sacrificed a winning streak that had climbed into the seventies.

Other undefeated sextet in the field is Milner, Class B winner of the Fourth District. Coach Paul Studstill's Falcons won 25 straight during the season. They open against Cumming of the Ninth District Wednesday afternoon.

Hartwell, Tenth District's Class B champ, won the State in 1945, the first year such a tourney was held. Mike Castron's sextet opens this meet Wednesday at noon against Doerun of the Second District. The other former winner back is Pleasant Grove of the Seventh District. Pleasant Grove won in Class C in 1947 and will be gunning for the B title this time.

Eight games are slated both Wednesday and Thursday with semifinals in both classes Friday and finals Saturday.

Figures compiled by Sam Burke, Georgia High School Association Secretary, show Pickens County to have the top Class B mark in both offense and defense. The Jasper sextet averaged 61.3 points per game and limited its foes to an average of 17.4. In Class C, Baker County's 59 points per game mark is tops but Chastetee of the Ninth District has the best defensive average—20.5 for its foes.

Only six teams will be on hand for the second straight year. In Class B, Pickens, Cumming, Adrian and Hawkinsville were here last time, while in Class C, Baker and Cusseta are the only returnees.

Here are the schedules for Wednesday and Thursday play:

Wednesday's schedule:
CLASS B
12 noon—Doerun (26-2) vs. Hartwell (18-1); 1:30—Milner (25-0) vs. Cumming (24-4); 3:45—Clarkston (11-8) vs. Pleasant Grove (23-2); 7:30—Dallas (25-1) vs. Jeff Davis (30-2); 10:00—Brooklet (30-2) vs. Hawkinsville (21-4).

CLASS C
2:30—Hampton vs. Pine Grove; 6:15—Social City (20-2) vs. Safford (20-2); 8:45—Chauvin (25-6) vs. Stillson (27-3).

Thursday's schedule:
CLASS B
1:15—Adrian (30-1) vs. Hartwell-Doerun winner; 3:45—Milner winner vs. Cumming; 6:15—Clarkston-Pleasant Grove winner; 8:45—Dallas-Jeff Davis winner; 10:00—Pickens County (32-0) vs. Brooklet-Hawkinsville winner.

CLASS C
12 noon—Cusseta (32-1) vs. Pine Grove-Hampton winner; 2:30—Chastetee (20-2) vs. Cedar Grove (26-1); 6:15—Baker County (26-1) vs. Social Circle-Stillson winner; 8:45—West Side (21-2) vs. Chauvin-Brooklet winner.

Babe, Bolesta Win 2-Ball At Orlando

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 25. (P)—Babe Zaharias and George Bolesta, record-setting medalists in the international mixed two-ball golf tournament rode another batch of birdies through to the championship Sunday.

The winning pair, both from Tampa, defeated Alice Bauer of Midland, Texas, and Pete Cooper of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., 4-3, and five. Miss Bauer and Cooper continued to play good golf but couldn't match the putting of both Mrs. Zaharias and Bolesta.

For the 31 holes the Zaharias-Bolesta duo was five under par over the 6,454-yard Dubsread layout. They ended up six rounds of golf—from medal to title—24 strokes under par.

At the end of 18 holes the Babe and Bolesta were four up with 35-35-70. Par is 36-35-71. On the afternoon round they shot 34 on the front side and were two under on the back side when the match closed on the 31st hole.

No less than three times in the afternoon round Miss Bauer and Cooper saw their own birdies matched by Bolesta's red-hot putter. He sank one of nearly 35 feet.

The victory was worth $500 each to Mrs. Zaharias and Bolesta. The losers got $250 each. All four are professionals.

Russia's British Note—Typical

While the world will rejoice at any sign of Soviet willingness to negotiate on any item relating to the possibility of world peace, the best advice remains to keep our powder dry.

The present note to Great Britain is too transparent to deceive.

In the first place, it comes just ahead of the scheduled meeting of Foreign Ministers at which the Soviet Union is supposed to be present and agree to peace treaties. It is an obvious effort to detract from that meeting.

Secondly, it must mean the Soviets have decided to be present, but before doing so will split off Britain, if they can, with a separate discussion which will run, we may be sure, contrary to the majority agenda of the Foreign Ministers.

That is readily seen as the basic diplomacy behind the Soviet note.

That they should attempt it is typical, but also within the rules of the diplomatic game. It is typical, too, of Soviet methods.

It is up to us, and more especially to Great Britain, not to lose sight of that fact. We don't believe Great Britain will, but the danger lies in the fact that the British and the United States do not see eye to eye on Formosa and Chiang Kai-shek. There is a strong Chiang lobby in this country which ignores the fact that a major portion of Chiang's army deserted to the Communists, which closes its eyes to the undeniable fact that most of the aid sent Chiang found its way to the Communist Chinese, and which omits also from its arguments the fact that when Chinese Communists made their successful drive to chase Chiang from China, these Communist armies were armed largely with American arms—not Japanese or Russian.

The Soviets will exploit the Chinese problem.

But we have faith in the British, who know diplomacy for what it is, and we do not believe they will allow the meeting of ministers to be sabotaged, or that they will be diverted from co-operation with the United States.

We suggest that meanwhile it might be well to do what the Chiang lobby asks—to withdraw our fleet and allow Chiang to invade China. But, of course, they will not wish the United States to supply the invasion fleet, man it and equip it. Or will they? Is their blind support of Chiang so great they wish to involve us on the Chinese mainland as well as Korea?

Meanwhile, we must press for a Foreign Ministers meeting and stand firmly behind the UN policy of opposing aggression.

Communist China In Trouble

The troubles of the Chinese Communists are mounting. They are part of, but worse than, the difficulties the Soviet Union is encountering elsewhere in its scheme for world empire.

United Nations forces in Korea have stopped cold, and thrown into reverse, the offensive the Communists boasted would drive us into the sea. Though it is too early to indulge in unwarranted optimism, there is evidence now the Chinese will be unable to launch a new, successful offensive—unless Russia has decided the time for all-out war has come and sends the planes and heavy fighting equipment, and trained fighting men as well, to aid Mao.

Chinese losses in Korea are estimated at 200,000 a month. China may have almost inexhaustible manpower, but she does not have inexhaustible divisions of trained fighting men. Some of her proudest divisions have been chewed up beyond repair by the superior fire power of UN troops.

Military reverses have brought into the open other plagues which afflict the Communists. It is admitted officially that open resistance has sprung up. Chinese peasants do not take well to the Communist yoke. Unrest has reached the proportions of armed rebellion in some areas and the Peiping Government, in a frantic effort to put it down, has ordered the death penalty for a long list of offenses. In effect it means anyone opposing the regime will be shot.

The North Koreans, who never liked the Chinese anyway, are growing more and more discontented with the Chinese conduct of the war. North Korean troops now refuse to take orders from their Chinese superiors. Both the North Koreans and the Chinese are resentful at Russia for failure to send planes and equipment.

All this does not necessarily mean the Chinese Communists are ready to sue for peace, or even to accept the offer of talks with the United Nations team now in the Far East seeking a settlement. Moscow, which is directing the Communist war in Korea as part of an overall world strategy, may have other plans. No one can predict what the Kremlin will do. There may be a sudden lessening of the tension. Or Russia might determine upon a desperate bid for quick success. That would mean general war.

Whatever it is, there is evidence something is about to happen in Korea.

How Much Has Georgia Lost?

There is no telling how many potential outstanding leaders of agriculture, finance, industry, business and politics were among the 318,000 Georgians who migrated to other states in the past 10 years. No doubt there were many, and Georgia can ill afford to lose them.

We'd like to believe, and it obviously is partly true, that a great many of those who left the State in the last decade did so as a natural result of the dislocation of the war years. But the fact remains that, though Georgia, along with the rest of the South, has made remarkable progress, the opportunities offered by other regions are in many cases superior. And the disturbing point is that those who leave the State for the better opportunities of other regions usually are the most ambitious of our young people.

Only Florida among the Southeastern States gained in migration of residents. All the rest lost and Georgia was third from the top in that respect. Mostly the losses by migration were more than made up by the natural increase in population.

But it is plain that neither Georgia nor any other state in the region, except Florida, is succeeding in offering sufficient opportunity to hold a great many of our most desirable citizens.

But for Peron, Saving Not Needed

Word from Argentina is that his wife, Evita, has called on President Peron to run for re-election when his term expires next year.

There's nothing like keeping these grass-roots movements in the family.

Peron's re-election is necessary, according to his next of kin, to save Argentina.

Save it for whom... the Perons?

Of course, one can understand Evita's interest in Juan's remaining in office. Being the President's wife in Argentina is roughly the equivalent of holding a license to steal, and Evita, being a practical person, has no intention of letting hers expire.

The tragedy of it is that La Prensa, the only newspaper left in the Argentine with the courage to say so, is currently closed down by the Peronists despite the fact that Argentina's constitution contains a freedom of the press guarantee taken almost word for word from ours.

"Never send to know for whom the bell tolls..."

Incidentally, the U. S. disposition to countenance such totalitarian tactics on the part of those we recognize and, in some cases, subsidize is the most effective propaganda at the Kremlin's disposal. For all the free world's antagonism toward Communism, there are millions whose antipathy for Fascism is yet undiminished. And while we may need Peron and Franco in the impending crusade against collective imperialism, we owe it to our heritage at least to frown on the rape of freedom either at home or abroad.

Evita Peron is only half right when she calls upon her Hitlerian hubby to run again to "save Argentina." Argentina needs saving, all right. But from—not by—the Perons.

How the '52 Campaign Looks

WASHINGTON—In one way or another the major battle over the Presidency or a Presidential nomination in 1952 seems to be shaping up at this stage of things between Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, present commander of allied forces in Western Europe.

Here is the way some of the political crystal-ball gazers are now beginning to size up the situation: As to the Republican nomination, Taft and his supporters, in a series of behind-the-scenes moves, are fast grabbing control of the party machinery, with the opposition scattered and unorganized.

Already, this far in advance of the next national convention, still a good 15 months away, the Ohio Senator is calculated to have at least half of the strength necessary to give him the nomination. That is figured on a basis of the vote he polled in the 1948 convention, which was 274 on the second ballot—or exactly half of the number needed to capture the nomination.

Gains Since then the Taft strength is conceded to have increased measurably. It derives chiefly from the added prestige he gained by winning re-election last year by a majority. His main support lies in the old isolationist belt of the Middle West, together with certain segments of the South, long a Taft stronghold among Republicans. But he is making inroads into other territory also.

The group of States where he is reported to have made new gains includes Colorado, Idaho, Utah, Wisconsin, Missouri, Montana, Maryland, Indiana, Nebraska and the two Dakotas. These States will have an aggregate of 190 votes in the next convention. Added to the minimum support he would be expected to start out with, this would give him a total of 464, or less than 100 short of a majority.

When a man gets that close to the nomination he is practically in. It usually is an easy matter to trade for the balance.

From the way the Taft candidacy is moving along, gaining momentum as it goes, it is becoming increasingly apparent that the only way he may be stopped is for the opposition to unite on a strong man to be set up against him. It is at this point that Gen. Eisenhower's name enters the picture.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, the past nominee of the party, has put Eisenhower forward as his choice for the nomination next year. Dewey, who has renounced any further claims to the party prize, will control upward of 100 delegates from New York State.

'Ike' If Gen. Eisenhower makes himself available for the Republican nomination, the support pledged by Dewey would undoubtedly be the rallying point for all anti-Taft forces. In that way the struggle over the nomination would lie between Taft and Eisenhower.

But there is no assurance yet, of course, that the General in the end will lend himself to the boom being launched in his behalf by Gov. Dewey. On the contrary, a strong suspicion is growing up in Washington that Eisenhower, if he has any Presidential ambitions at all, will finally emerge as the Democratic nominee.

This feeling is held on the assumption that President Truman will not be a candidate to succeed himself next year and will turn to a strong man to carry the party on to victory. Certainly Gen. Ike would seem to fit that bill better than anyone else who could be named.

Offer As for how the President feels about the General, we have a record of that in the Eisenhower memoirs. He recounts how Mr. Truman personally offered to step aside and support him for the Democratic nomination in 1948, expressing the view that the people would overwhelmingly elect him. The incident took place during the Potsdam Conference immediately after the German collapse. There has been nothing to indicate that the President has changed his view about Eisenhower since then, his appointment to the new allied European command not being without significance on this score.

Thus it would appear that the battle over the Presidency in 1952 will lie between Taft and Eisenhower in one way or another—either through the General being set up as the chief opponent of the Ohio Senator for the Republican nomination, or by Eisenhower and Taft being the respective nominees of the two major parties.

President Truman, by being in control of the party machinery, is in a position to throw the Democratic nomination to Gen. Ike with ease, if he is of a frame of mind not to run again. The majority opinion among informed party leaders now is that he has already made up his mind not to seek a third term, and there is a growing feeling that he will turn to Gen. Eisenhower as the logical man to succeed him. Few Democrats, if any, believe that Gen. Ike would refuse to accept.

That Little Drip in the Home

Do you have a little drip in your home? If you do, it's costing you money. What's more, you are wasting a precious natural resource of which we can easily run short. Don't take it for granted. Water tables are getting low to the point that national planners are seriously concerned. That's why this drip-drop business hurts the war effort. The president of a plumbers' association says there are 24,000,000 leaky faucets in American homes today. He says further that if a tap drops one drip or drips one second, it wastes 10 gallons of water a day. Ten gallons a day from 24,000,000 leaky faucets would make a big pond. Check the drip in your home. Don't let the country go dry.

Robert Griggs, conductor of the "Quiet Please" column on the front page of the Douglas County Sentinel, has something to say about water through a poem. The poem, on a poster from a water meter company, says that man owes much to H-2-O, and says it like this:

Running water brings us health,
And other things more than wealth.
Without it we would thirst and smell,
Our homes might burn or wouldn't sell.

It irrigates sweet peas and roses,
Washes necks and ears and noses;
At the movie cools the air
For the lovestick, spooning pair.

Running water puts out fires,
Sprinkles the lawn and never tires;
Bathes the babe, his pants and gown;
Makes insurance rates go down.

Flushes toilets, fills the tub
For dirty clothes, aye, there's the rub;

Wets our whistles, keeps us clean,
Makes the vegetables green.

These things running water brings
Alike to common men and kings;
And so from birth clear to the end
Running water is man's best friend.

The Protests Get Louder

WASHINGTON—We are hearing a rising protest around here these days from progressive groups, consumer organizations and, most vociferously of late, from labor about the powerful grip that big business has on the defense program. From the same groups we also are hearing complaints about the tendency in Congress to favor big business in formulating tax programs. They claim unfair discrimination against small-income folks, and feel that proper precautions have not been taken about rent controls, housing and the like for the rank-and-file worker in the defense program. In both respects the diagnosis is correct. It is also what happened in the last war. It provokes from the long-time observer, cynically, that old familiar wheeze:

"Don't you know there's a war on?"

To get some of the reasons, though at first blush there may seem little connection, you can go to a factual analysis by the Federal Trade Commission—the result of an exhaustive investigation—that shows the intricate web of interlocking directorates among the nation's great basic industries that produces for war as well as peace.

It is almost as simple as "them that has gits—and keeps."

This "kissing-kin" relationship among great units of our economy makes it a cozy family affair, with the result that big business can exert its influence through its representatives in the defense program in a sort of common front to protect its preserves—and even come out in the end bigger and stronger, as in the last war. Similarly, it can bring its concentrated power to bear upon Congress in what some call the "super lobby" which operates frequently on a "one-for-all-and-all-for-one" basis.

There is nothing venal in all of this. We've just accepted it as a habit. It always happens.

The natural effect of a national emergency such as now exists is to freeze the economy through regulations and controls. Those who are in command see that their privileges likewise are frozen, that is, protected against any tampering.

These privileges include a lack of competition in many areas. That means to you and me, as citizens, higher costs for all the things we use every day and, as taxpayers, higher costs for the things the Government buys with our tax money for our common defense. We are less protected than normally since a law has been enacted exempting certain interindustry agreements, normally illegal, from antitrust statutes.

In its cautious way the Federal Trade Commission concluded from its investigations that interlocking relationships it found "involved reasonable probabilities that competition would be reduced thereby." Its inquiry embraced the 1,000 biggest manufacturing companies and 300 non-manufacturing units with which some of them are interlinked, including banks, investment trusts, insurance companies, railroads, public utilities and distributing enterprises.

Several pages are devoted to explanation of interlocking relationships, with names of the corporations involved. Space forbids the listings, but we can run over the categories to show how they fit into your everyday life. Here goes—Food, canned, dairies, grain-mill products, bakeries, sugar, beverages, steel, oil, metals, machinery, aircraft, motor vehicles, textiles, rubber, apparel, glass.

The Trade Commission said that some of these tie-ups actually are in violation of the Clayton Antitrust Act, but many are not because the law doesn't cover them. It does not, for instance, cover interrelationships between sellers and buyers, of which there are many. These result in exclusive agreements that squeeze out competitors and affect you and me in prices and quality. The exempted categories also include exclusive and preferential arrangements between industrial corporations and financial institutions. Those handicap competitors in getting credit and that explains why the Government had to go into the moneylending business to maintain free enterprise.

It would be suggested here that perhaps the Clayton Act ought to be further amended. But such a suggestion might be brash since an amendment that Congress put through this year to section 7 in an effort to reduce mergers tending toward monopoly took over 30 years from the time it was first recommended by a President.

'Mama's Boys' in Uniform

The Editors: In regard to an article which appeared in your 21 February issue by Dr. John Warkentin, from Emory, who says that "Mama's boy is not suitable for the draft."

I have had my share of a mother's love, but when I reached 18 and was called into the Army in the last war, no one wrote articles saying I was not suitable for the draft. I was in and out of combat before I was 19 years old and I still enjoy a mother's love. There were millions of young men just like myself, who carried on quite a burden and stood up under the strain.

I ask the doctors are they going by medical records rather than common knowledge in telling the parents of young men that their sons are unsuitable for UMT at the age of 18. Think hard, gentlemen, for your very lives may depend on "Mama's Boys" some day.

Think of one old lady sending a valentine to another, a handmade valentine featuring an orchid sent with the explanation, "I think you deserve an orchid." The valentine

"While the unusual Winter season of 1950-51 has caused widespread suffering and inconvenience, better housing and heating facilities have made it less rigorous than milder winters of the past."—Farm bulletin excerpt.

No matter what the weather does... someone is sure to state... "it's not as cold now as it was... way back in '98... that was the worst I ever saw... it froze us stiff as starch... and didn't even start to thaw... until the last of March.

"That kind of weather was no fun... with snow up to your knees... before I got the milking done... the stuff would start to freeze... we'd get a little misty rain... then it would start to sleet... and snow, and then it froze again... you never saw the beat.

"I know you think I am a liar... but when the North wind blew... and we piled logs upon the fire... it sucked them out the flue."

I hope I live a little... longer in this vale of tears... so I can sit and whittle... while I speak of former years... I'll get the kids together... and I'll say, "now listen, son... we don't have Winter weather... like we had in '51."

That Little Drip in the Home

Do you have a little drip in your home? If you do, it's costing you money. What's more, you are wasting a precious natural resource of which we can easily run short. Don't take it for granted. Water tables are getting low to the point that national planners are seriously concerned. That's why this drip-drop business hurts the war effort. The president of a plumbers' association says there are 24,000,000 leaky faucets in American homes today. He says further that if a tap drops one drip or drips one drop a second, it wastes 10 gallons of water a day. Ten gallons a day from 24,000,000 leaky faucets would make a big pond. Check the drip in your home. Don't let the country go dry.

Robert Griggs, conductor of the "Quiet Please" column on the front page of the Douglas County Sentinel, has something to say about water through a poem. The poem, on a poster from a water meter company, says that man owes much to H-2-O, and says it like this:

Running water brings us health,
And other things more than wealth.
Without it we would thirst and smell,
Our homes might burn or wouldn't sell.

It irrigates sweet peas and roses,
Washes necks and ears and noses;
At the movie cools the air
For the lovestick, spooning pair.

Running water puts out fires,
Sprinkles the lawn and never tires;
Bathes the babe, his pants and gown;
Makes insurance rates go down.

Flushes toilets, fills the tub
For dirty clothes, aye, there's the rub;

Wets our whistles, keeps us clean,
Makes the vegetables green.

These things running water brings
Alike to common men and kings;
And so from birth clear to the end
Running water is man's best friend.

The Protests Get Louder

WASHINGTON—We are hearing a rising protest around here these days from progressive groups, consumer organizations and, most vociferously of late, from labor about the powerful grip that big business has on the defense program. From the same groups we also are hearing complaints about the tendency in Congress to favor big business in formulating tax programs. They claim unfair discrimination against small-income folks, and feel that proper precautions have not been taken about rent controls, housing and the like for the rank-and-file worker in the defense program. In both respects the diagnosis is correct. It is also what happened in the last war. It provokes from the long-time observer, cynically, that old familiar wheeze:

"Don't you know there's a war on?"

To get some of the reasons, though at first blush there may seem little connection, you can go to a factual analysis by the Federal Trade Commission—the result of an exhaustive investigation—that shows the intricate web of interlocking directorates among the nation's great basic industries that produces for war as well as peace.

It is almost as simple as "them that has gifts—and keeps."

This "kissing-kin" relationship among great units of our economy makes it a cozy family affair, with the result that big business can exert its influence through its representatives in the defense program—in a sort of common front to protect its preserves—and even come out in the end bigger and stronger, as in the last war. Similarly, it can bring its concentrated power to bear upon Congress in what some call the "super lobby" which operates frequently on a "one-for-all-and-all-for-one" basis.

There is nothing venal in all of this. We've just accepted it as a habit. It always happens.

The natural effect of a national emergency such as now exists is to freeze the economy through regulations and controls. Those who are in command see that their privileges likewise are frozen, that is, protected against any tampering.

These privileges include a lack of competition in many areas. That means to you and me, as citizens, higher costs for all the things we use every day and, as taxpayers, higher costs for the things the Government buys with our tax money for our common defense. We are less protected than normally since a law has been enacted exempting certain interindustry agreements, normally illegal, from antitrust statutes.

In its cautious way the Federal Trade Commission concluded from its investigations that interlocking relationships it found "involved reasonable probabilities that competition would be reduced thereby." Its inquiry embraced the 1,000 biggest manufacturing companies and 300 non-manufacturing units with which some of them are interlinked, including banks, investment trusts, insurance companies, railroads, public utilities and distributing enterprises.

Several pages are devoted to explanation of interlocking relationships, with names of the corporations involved. Space forbids the listings, but we can run over the categories to show how they fit into your everyday life. Here goes—Food, canners, dairies, grain-mill products, bakeries, sugar, beverages, steel, oil, metals, machinery, aircraft, motor vehicles, textiles, rubber, apparel, glass.

The Trade Commission said that some of these tie-ups actually are in violation of the Clayton Antitrust Act, but many are not because the law doesn't cover them. It does not, for instance, cover interrelationships between sellers and buyers, of which there are many. These result in exclusive agreements that squeeze out competitors and affect you and me in prices and quality. The exempted categories also include exclusive and preferential arrangements between industrial corporations and financial institutions. Those handicap competitors in getting credit and that explains why the Government had to go into the moneylending business to maintain free enterprise.

It would be suggested here that perhaps the Clayton Act ought to be further amended. But such a suggestion might be brash since an amendment that Congress put through this year to section 7 in an effort to reduce mergers tending toward monopoly took over 30 years from the time it was first recommended by a President.

'Mama's Boys' in Uniform

The Editors: In regard to an article which appeared in your 21 February issue by Dr. John Warkentin, from Emory, who says that "Mama's boy is not suitable for the draft."

I have had my share of a mother's love, but when I reached 18 and was called into the Army in the last war, no one wrote articles saying I was not suitable for the draft. I was in and out of combat before I was 19 years old and I'm still standing up under that strain and I still enjoy a mother's love. There were millions of young men just like myself, who carried on quite a burden and stood up under the strain.

I ask the doctors are they going by medical records rather than common knowledge in telling the parents of young men that their sons are unsuitable for UMT at the age of 18. Think hard, gentlemen, for your very lives may depend on "Mama's Boys" some day.

A Place of Peace

The Editors: There are enough items printed about deplorable happenings. Maybe a cheerful account of a place and persons of goodwill and cheerfulness is in order.

The place is Mrs. Lee's Nursing home, and the persons, her four old ladies—all she can accommodate with the limited room she has. The interesting fact is the pleasant relations that prevail. Think of one old lady sending a valentine to another, a handmade valentine featuring an orchid sent with the explanation, "I think you deserve an orchid." The valentine sender is a great one for the sweet old custom. She has made and sent out boxes of them. Her many friends also will be glad of this word of Mrs. Mattie Hardaway Strickland, of Newnan. And another of our foursome is Mrs. Miller, a longtime resident of Moreland, but now of Turin. Another is Miss Jessie Holmes, of Newnan.

And last and oldest is I, the writer of this. We have family prayers every evening which may account for the harmony that prevails.

'Get Out and Stay Out!'

When the Trustees received the Georgia Grant, they were convinced that they had a veritable gold mine. In order to prevent the British Government from cutting in on the profits when the colony began to pay the anticipated dividends, the Trustees decided to rule the province by regulation rather than by His Majesty's law. The people were not allowed to vote for any person or thing. They were supposed to take what was given them and be grateful, a condition that existed in no other British colony in America! Three judges were appointed when a "court" was finally set up by Oglethorpe. They were unlettered men who could barely read and write!

Yet they passed vicious sentences on those accused of crime. There was no appeal and the Trustees' ironclad rule that no lawyers be allowed in the Colony was rigidly enforced. They visualized Georgia as a "happy, flourishing colony... free from that pest and scourge of mankind called lawyers." A young barrister named Williamson announced his intention to demand a show-down on this regulation, but suddenly changed his mind and left the colony. Another by the name of Watson "bootlegged" legal advice! These are the only recorded attacks on the rule that remained in effect for many years.

FRED OTHMAN

Spring Is Already Upon Us

McCLEAN, Va.—I don't want to brag, or even put the U. S. Weather Bureau out of business, but the Othman long-range weather service, consisting of a horse, a family of skunks and a few other birds and beasts predicted last Fall that a hard Winter was coming up. You know what happened. We had icicles and the coldest dang Winter since George Washington crossed the Delaware. Predicting same was simple. The horse grew a magnificent fur coat; the skunks made themselves at home in the warmest stall in the barn; the caterpillars grew extra rings of hair and the peddlers of tires with sawdust in the treads for icy driving never were so thin. The result was obvious. So if the official forecasters blindly will stifle their sneers and keep their eyes on their barometers, I shall predict, with the aid of my furry assistants, the sort of Spring that's en route.

It's almost here now; warm, damp and to be featured by daffodils in blossom so early that the newspaper photographers will take pictures of the first ones.

Already they're poking green from the snow on the shady side of my house. A daffodil, I hasten to admit, is a notoriously unreliable sign. A horse is better. Never makes a mistake.

And our horse at this writing is shedding his overcoat as fast as he can. Rub your fingers over his flank and you get a fistful of hair. 'Try to use a curry comb on him and in two swipes you clog it; he is preparing for a warm Springtime.

This also goes for the skunks, which strut lordly through our wood lot. Their fur is shiny black, except for that white stripe, and even now one mother skunk is parading with five small skunklets in line behind her.

Rose bushes are something like daffodils; they sometimes get fooled and have their silly buds frozen off. Even so, they are an indication, and every rose bush on our place is sprouting small, reddish leaves. That is not all.

CHANNING COPE

Getting Its Color Back

Don't tell anybody, but the green is getting back in the fields of South Georgia and North Florida, and even here at Yellow River the fields are losing that brownish-gray color that makes everything look drab and bleak during our Winters. The January jasmine put out some blooms and the redbud trees are budding along the way. I saw pigs and cattle grazing on small grain in deep South Georgia. Along the St. Mary's River the first trials of Kentucky 31 fescue are looking good and the planters of it are getting enthusiastic. On the Ferguson farm there are 30 acres of it being grazed. The bitter Winter down there wasn't quite as bitter as up here and not so long-lasting. Fergo thinks they need prepare for only four months of Winter; possibly 4½ at the most.

If we have good luck from here out we will get by again without feeding any hay or concentrate.

When I left Yellow River 12 days ago the temperature was about 15 degrees and I told my associates to begin feeding hay to the cattle if it became necessary. It now develops they didn't have to.

Too, the warm spell now on has brought out the fescue and it has put on an inch of growth during the past week. We think we will get through the rest of the Winter without having to feed anything other than pastures. If so, this will be our fourth Winter the animals have gone through without additional feed.

Of course, we would be better off if we had another 20 acres of fescue and I am ready to admit also that we used about three-fourths acre per animal this Winter so far, but nevertheless we still haven't had to carry any feed to the cattle and that is quite a something. Furthermore, we have used no buildings for the animals and this lack of expense must be taken into consideration.

And we haven't gotten off the front porch much either. What I mean, really, is that we didn't get too far away from the fire. The cattle gained weight during the Winter and are in good shape. We culled out the worst ones about February 1 and they had been gaining all through the bitter weather.

On a seven-hour trip from Fernandina, Fla., to Yellow River, we pass through over 300 miles of territory. It is pretty shocking to see how little green growth there is along the road. The Winter has exacted an awful toll. On the other hand, we are not left completely without remedies. I, for one, believe that the fescue grass will meet our needs even in bad weather, if we have enough of it and if we do not begin grazing it until Winter sets in.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Rep. Buchanan's Record

You may have wondered what I have been driving at in my plodding expose of the phony Congressional investigation of "lobbying" which was conducted last Summer by a special committee of the House under the chairmanship of a poor hack from McKeesport, Pa., named Frank Buchanan.

I am going to show you that this was a scheme to railroad a few individuals to jail for operating anti-Communist propaganda societies.

I challenged the committee while it still had some time to run, and promised to blow the whole thing wide open. Recently, I called on Buchanan, who somehow got himself mired in this thing, and confronted him with three indictments charging him with cheap fraud. He said they were not real indictments but just informations. He is a liar. They were true bills by grand juries. Then he said he was cleared when the true bills were nolle prossed. Again he lied. On the back of each true bill the statement is written that the indictment was dismissed on the payment of the costs by the defendant.

Chester Harris, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, who covered that end of these cases, wrote that he interviewed Grant L. Stoner, an engineer, of 1511 Prescott Ave., McKeesport, where Buchanan formerly was mayor, and Stoner told him: "He (Buchanan) straightened up with my son. And he also paid the costs of the case."

The son, George Stoner, a minor at the time, had bought an automobile from Buchanan.

By Harris: "Was this Buchanan the same man who later became mayor of McKeesport and is now congressman?"

By Stoner: "Yes, the very same man."

Buchanan declined to examine photographs of the indictments when I offered them to him.

Congressman Clarence J. Brown, of Ohio, a Republican, was amazed when I showed him the indictments. He said he wished that he had had them during the phony inquiry into "lobbying" which was instigated by some force outside Congress. Congressman Joseph P. O'Hara, of Minnesota, also a Republican, expressed similar reaction. They both believed the inquiry was an outside job.

Lucien Hilmer, the "staff director" of the committee, was counsel for Georgia Shaw Wheeler, the American who turned against the United States after serving in the American Military Government in Germany, and went over the hill to Communist Czechoslovakia. There he was reported to have asked for asylum. Before joining the American Military Government, Wheeler had been employed in the Department of Labor, the war production board and the foreign economic administration.

Hilmer represented Wheeler before a loyalty board of the Civil Service Commission in a hearing held on October 29, 1945. Five men in Army uniform testified that Wheeler was of good character. The case was founded on a report from the Civil Service Commission to the foreign economic administration that Wheeler had been found ineligible for government employment according to data gathered by the FBI and the Civil Service Commission. Hilmer was assigned by the F. E. A. to defend Wheeler. The Civil Service Commission sent a report to the House committee on un-American activities which said Hilmer immediately attacked the commission, stating that the hearings were "un-American and totalitarian." Hilmer demanded that Wheeler's accusers be brought to face him. The commission explained that the loyalty board had neither power of subpoena nor money to pay the transportation and other costs of witnesses.

"Attorney Hilmer was abusive all through the hearing," the report said, "and at every opportunity would belittle the Civil Service Commission, insult the board members and attempt to bulldoze the board."

Hilmer formerly was assistant to Max Lowenthal, the mysterious ubiquitous figure only recently introduced to public notice by Jonathan Daniels, one of President Truman's selfless secretaries, in his Truman biography entitled "Man of Independence." Daniels depicted Lowenthal as a dominating personality who had spotted a promising, or pliable, character in the petty county commissioner from Kansas City. Lowenthal had had a hand in molding Truman's beliefs, which abruptly turned radical socialist. In Daniels' description, Truman was a sort of Mortimer Snerd who got an attack of intellect after Lowenthal introduced him to Louis D. Brandeis. Daniels portrayed Lowenthal as a modest man, but Lowenthal's own testimony disclosed an arrogant, boastful fellow when he appeared before the House committee on un-American activities.

Unlike George Shaw Wheeler, who appeared with Lowenthal's assistant, Lucien Hilmer, as his counsel, Lowenthal refused to be examined at all by the Civil Service Commission. Lowenthal spoke scornfully of a "little" investigator for the commission. He said it would be beneath his dignity to answer. Lowenthal substantially refused to tell the committee on un-American activities the names of mysterious private organizations which procured his appointment to an important financial position on the staff of General Lucius Clay in Berlin or the names of individuals who approached him to that purpose. The committee let Lowenthal get away with this defiance. But Buchanan's committee caused the indictment of Edward Rumely and Joseph Kamp for refusing to make public the names of individuals who bought books from them advocating their concept of constitutional government.

Louis Little, of Pittsburgh, counsel for Buchanan's committee, came under fire from Congressman Clare Hoffman, of Michigan. He retired from the inquiry before the committee expired.

'MANEUVERED' MOTION' MEANS NO BALLOON
Dr. Anthony Mirarchi Explains His Flying Saucer Theory

Former AF Scientist Warns Of Flying Saucer Danger

SCITUATE, Mass., Feb. 25—(AP)—A former Air Force scientist Sunday brushed aside the idea that flying saucers are just balloons and urged a full investigation of what he said may be experiments by "a potential enemy of the United States."

Dr. Anthony O. Mirarchi, who was employed by the Air Force as an air chemist in its geophysical laboratory, took issue with a recent magazine article written by Dr. Uner Liddel, Navy scientist. Liddel said what people have been seeing are plastic balloons sent into the upper air for radiation research.

Mirarchi said that if flying saucers are experimental missiles launched by foreign hands they could "lead to a worse Pearl Harbor than we ever experienced."

"The Navy report is erroneous, it lulls people into a false sense of security," he said in an interview.

He said that as an assistant chief of a branch of the geophysical research organization, he conducted an investigation and recommended a "considerable appropriation" to press a study of the mysterious phenomena.

At Washington, an Air Force spokesman who was asked about Mirarchi's contentions, had this to say:

"In over 500 investigations we have made so far we have yet to find one concrete bit of evidence to back up these reports of flying saucers."

However, the spokesman added, the Air Force has not terminated the long study of flying saucer rumors. It is still to be carried on at the USAF Air Materiel Command center at Dayton, Ohio, with Col. Harold E. Watson directing the studies.

Dr. Mirarchi said that after studying extensive files of the Office of Strategic Information, covering hundreds of eyewitness reports of flying saucers or "fireballs," he concluded the observations were consistent with "a missile programmed in advance."

In other words, the objects had "maneuvered motion," as though guided by some mechanism. He said the description of vertical and horizontal motions did not indicate any natural phenomenon like a meteor or the erratic motion of drifting balloons.

He remarked that a number of "the fireball observations came from a certain region of New Mexico which is critical to the national interest." In that region is the Los Alamos atomic installation.

Dr. Mirarchi, a native of Shamokin, Pa., took his doctor's degree in chemistry from the University of Rome. He left his government position to enter business for himself and now lives in Scituate.

Salvationists Celebrate 60 Years in City

The 60th Anniversary of Salvation Army work in Atlanta will be celebrated March 2 to 5 as 1,200 delegates converge on the city from 15 Southern States.

Lt.-Commissioner Albert E. Chesham, Southern Territorial Commander, will be in charge of the anniversary meetings.

High point of five meetings open to the public will be a lecture Sunday night in which Commissioner Norman S. Marshall, a former director of young people's activities and principal of the training college in Atlanta from 1927 to 1935, will give an up-to-date picture of the Salvation Army's international program.

Other meetings include a Missionary pageant on Friday at Wesley Memorial Church where Col. William Noble, who has recently returned from India, will speak. Delegates will parade to the City Hall on Saturday at 2 p. m. to be welcomed by Mayor Hartsfield, and they will hear a Festival of Music Sunday night in the gymnasium of the Atlanta Division, University of Georgia.

Ten Salvation Army bands will be directed by Maj. Frank Longino.

The future of the Army's program in the South will be discussed Monday and Tuesday in the Officers' Councils.

YOUR STARS TODAY

Sun in Pisces
General Tendencies—Today seems to be an excellent time for starting the week, what with lively indications for health and high spirits, increasingly favorably money matters and a little additional pep or stimulus for serious work. Maybe the truly social or romantic side of life will have to wait until later on but there will still be enough activity to keep most people occupied. The day seems to be excellent for people born in the last part of October or the middle of March.

If It's Your Birthday—I don't see how you can complain about having a poor year in 1951, but are a very sensitive person and may feel that not everything has turned out exactly according to specifications, even when nearly everyone else would think that prospects were booming. You have changes ahead of you, probably resulting in some financial benefit, but as you are not particularly fond of unexpected new condition you may not welcome these opportunities. Try to look upon them as open doors to future good fortune.

3 Win Emory Scholarships

Three Atlanta high school youths literally "talked" their way into college scholarships during the weekend at a speech contest sponsored by the Barkley Forum of Emory University.

Jack Marvin Horowitz, of Grady High School, was proclaimed first prize winner of a $450 scholarship. Howard Klein, of the Junior League Speech School, won second prize, and Bobby Roberts, of North Fulton High School, took third place. They received $250 and $200 scholarship prizes respectively.

The winners were announced at a dinner given the contestants in the Alumni Memorial Building at Emory. Other contestants were Charles Berner, of Hoke Smith High School; Robert Hansard, of Roswell High School, and John Goff, of Druid Hills High School. Judges for the contest were: James H. Dornberg, instructor in Economics; George A. Neeley, Associate Professor of Speech, and Dr. Judson C. Ward, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. C. B. Rogers was chairman of the speech contest.

Gold Coast Solons Tutored at College

ACCRA, Gold Coast, British West Africa, Feb. 25—(AP)—Members of the Gold Coast's new legislative assembly took a special two-day course over the weekend in parliamentary procedure. The assembly meets Monday.

Professors of the University College of the Gold Coast conducted the course, attended by 50 of the 84 members, and said their students showed an intense interest in learning more about the subject.

The 4,000,000 Gold Coasters won a measure of self-government under a new constitution which became effective the first of the year.

We are in a state of Emergency.

We must build our military strength—and, at the same time, we must keep our economy strong for the long pull. Inflation bleeds both!

How to pay for tanks and guns — and still hold the line on Inflation

Don't Go Through Life ...

Not Sick Enough To Stop Working; Not Well Enough To Work Well

Many people go through life not sick enough to stop working, but not well enough to work well. Some folks do something about it, others just talk about it. Mrs. J. H. Digby, Cedar Glades Rd., Hot Springs, Ark., could offer a word of advice to those folks who postpone doing something to help themselves. Her advice would be to take HADACOL for Mrs. Digby found that Mrs. J. H. Digby by taking HADACOL, she was giving her system Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron which it lacked. And taking HADACOL helped her overcome those deficiency-caused ailments; she kept right on taking it now that she is feeling good, to keep those troubles away.

Here is what Mrs. Digby says: "I am 51 years old and I have suffered from stomach distress for some time with bloating and gas. I was weak and nervous and I couldn't sleep at night. I read in the paper about HADACOL. I started taking it and I have taken five large bottles. It helped me from the start and now I feel fine. I wish everybody that had stomach distress would try HADACOL. I can truthfully say it is fine."

(C) 1951, The LeBlanc Corp.

No American begrudges one dollar necessary for defense but nobody wants to spend a single cent unnecessarily.

Congress has the responsibility of reducing non-defense spending as much as possible. What is left will still be a big enough burden for all of us.

There are two ways we can pay for defense while holding the line against Inflation.

The first way, which President Truman has endorsed, is to go on a "pay-as-you-go" basis. Under this plan the Government takes more from everybody in taxes to balance its income with its spending. Every individual then, has less to spend. This stops some of the demand for scarce civilian goods and helps make what is available go around.

To make "pay-as-you-go" work, and to keep the Federal debt from going higher, all individuals and businesses will face higher Federal income taxes as well as other taxes which both add to the Government's income and discourage individual spending. This calls for tough decisions and sacrifices.

The second and less desirable way is for the Government to pay for part of its spending by borrowing. The least inflationary way to borrow is from the people. This is done by selling bonds directly to individuals or to investing institutions. By this method people save, instead of spending for scarce goods, and this helps reduce the demand for these goods. Borrowing, however, means increased taxes now as well as later to pay this debt.

5 more things that must be done to check Inflation—even with price controls

- 1. Increase production: To meet defense needs and provide civilian necessities.
- 2. Maintain credit curbs: To reduce the competition for civilian goods.
- 3. Increase personal savings: To provide investment money for greater production and to lessen the demand for goods.
- 4. Buy only for real needs: Overbuying only increases shortages, adds to the inflationary pressures.
- 5. Cut non-military expenditures: To provide money for vital military needs and to hold down tax increases and borrowing.

These things won't be easy for any of us to do. We must also forego increased wages and profits unless they are the result of increased production. But everybody will agree it's worth sacrificing to prevent the Sixth Column Enemy—INFLATION—from bleeding our economy.

This message is one of a series on Inflation brought to you by the life insurance companies and their agents who believe that keeping America strong is the job of each and every one of us.

MISS MIRIAM GAY

Miss Gay Betrothed

Mrs. Linwood D. Gay, of Atlanta, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Miriam Gay, to Hunter Meighan, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., State Assemblyman from the 4th District, Westchester County, N. Y. The wedding is scheduled for Spring.

Mr. Meighan is the son of Mrs. Burton C. Meighan and the late Mr. Meighan of Mamaroneck. He is a graduate of Columbia University and the New York Law School, and is a member of the law firm of Meighan and Neversulmer, of New York City. Chinese Girl, Korean to Talk Here Friday

Churchwomen and the general public will gather in the Audio Visual Room of the Carnegie Library here March 2 to hear how a representative of China and a representative of Korea view the enmity of their homelands.

Both Miss Hilda Keng of China and Charles Song of Korea say that real peace and friendship between the warring nations will not come from the use of arms, but only from the hearts of men of good will influenced by the Prince of Peace.

Miss Keng, a graduate of Christian mission schools in China, adopted Christianity as her faith and was disinherited by her wealthy Confucianist family for doing so. To further her religious education, she sold her jewels for the price of ocean passage to the United States and entered Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn. When she had completed her course there, generous friends helped her to enter Emory School of Theology here.

When she has finished her course here, and when the war is over in China, she hopes to set up a school there for underprivileged youth. She plans a school like Berry Schools in North Georgia.

Song, having completed his theology course at Emory, was ready to return home when war broke out. Orders came for him to remain here for the present, so he is doing postgraduate work at Emory.

This Korean father of four said his wife writes that an estimated 90 per cent of Korean Christians have been killed by Communists, and that stark tragedy, death and destruction are rampant.

Song praised the work of Church World Service in his homeland, saying that thousands of suffering, destitute refugees have lost everything but faith in a God of mercy and love as exemplified in the help of friendly people.

The meeting is sponsored by Atlanta Churchwomen.

THE ADVENTURES OF LINDA

Pale Polish Enhances Clean Teen Fingertips

Linda's query about her nails concerned only the use of polish: "I would like to use nail polish but am not sure it looks good." ... Let's say that colored nail polish ... a fragile-colored pink tone ... looks well on teensters' nails IF:

1. Your hands and nails are scrupulously clean at all times;
2. Your hands are smooth;
3. The cuticles are trim and neat, not jagged with hangnails;
4. You never bite your nails.

Fall down on a single one of these rules and colored nail polish will only call attention to your hands' defects.

How to keep your hands and fingers in tip-top condition?

Scrub them often. Use a special white nail pencil to bleach away stains and remove any caked dirt from under the nails. Several times a week, wrap an orange-wood stick in cotton, moisten it with a cuticle oil and work around the sides and base of each nail. Push the cuticle back, gently, to reveal your half-moons. This will keep you from getting hangnails and will help you get rid of any you already have. Never let chipped polish stay on your nails. Remove the polish from all 10 nails or repair the chipped one immediately. For removing your polish, dip a piece of cotton in a remover, (one which contains oils beneficial to both nails and cuticles) hold it on your nail for a second or two, then pull the cotton off, taking the polish with it.

To apply polish, use a very small amount on your brush to prevent it from running onto your cuticle. Apply it with a quick light stroke, working from the base of the cuticle to the end of the nail. Use cleansing tissue to remove polish from the nail tip. Two coats of polish gives longer wear, naturally, but be sure the first coat is dry before you apply the second.

And as a final touch, massage a good, rich hand cream into your hands, paying particular attention to your knuckles ... and use a dab or two on your elbows to keep them from looking grubby.

When you're not wearing polish, try buffing your nails. Ten times on each nail, always in the same direction, for a high sheen and lustre that is vastly becoming.

Hands that are lovely to have ... and to hold ... come from constant care. And meantime is the time to start caring.

Theory About Exposure Causing Pneumonia Exploded

In Osler's day it was permissible to discount ponderously about "lowered resistance." For example, in Osler's Practice (1906) the great teacher described lobar pneumonia (that is, inflammation of one or more of the five lobes of the lungs, due to the Pneumococcus) as infectious, giving several practical reasons for considering it infectious, yet retained the quaint statement that "as to the close association of pneumonia with exposure there can be no question."

Arbitrary, dogmatic statements like that were accepted as "authoritative" in Osler's day. If any physician questioned the "close" association between pneumonia and "exposure," he kept his doubts to himself—it would have been professional suicide to challenge a teaching of such an eminent medical authority.

But this is not Osler's day. It is your day, and your children's day. There is an overwhelming weight of scientific experiments, clinical evidence and ordinary and extraordinary experience against the Oslerian assumption of a "close association" between pneumonia and "exposure." On the other hand there is precious little evidence of any kind that "exposure" and pneumonia are more closely associated than "exposure" and any other type or kind of illness or disease you care to mention.

"Cold," wrote Dr. Osler in the nineteenth century, "is now regarded simply as a factor in lowering the resistance of the bronchial and pulmonary tissues." A fine sounding bit of mumbo-jumbo—no one has as yet defined "resistance" or distinguished it from immunity.

The medical authorities of the nineteenth century conjured up the "resistance" thing purely as an after-thought. It gave them room to maneuver and time to rearrange strategy when they realized that the infectious nature of pneumonia must take precedence over the silly old notion of "cold settled in the lungs."

Osler's conception of "exposure" was a wetting or a chilling, in the chapter on pneumonia. In the chapter on chronic rheumatism he wrote: "It is most common among the poor, particularly washerwomen, day laborers, and those whose occupation exposes them to cold and damp."

Cold and damp, my eye. Unpleasant, uncomfortable, sometimes downright painful, is the ordinary everyday "exposure" to cold, dampness, wetting of feet or clothing, drafts, sudden changes of weather, lack of sufficient clothing, chilling living quarters. But in any circumstance one who has to endure such "exposure" may at least feel assured that, short of frost-bite or freezing, no indisposition or illness will follow the chilling or the ducking.

Skimpy Diet Pares Health In Pregnancy

When the expectant mother understands why certain foods are indispensable in the diet, she will not want to run the risk of leaving them out of the daily menu during this important period.

Extra minerals and protein are needed for building the muscles, tissues and bones of the new baby. And there is increased need for all the vitamins. When these growth materials are not included in adequate amounts in the daily meals, nature draws from the mother's reserves to protect the baby, and the mother's health suffers.

The additional calcium and phosphorus required are furnished in a quart of milk. Many inquire if skim milk or buttermilk may be used in order to cut down on calories. Yes, provided Vitamin A is obtained from other sources, since this essential is lacking in skim milk and buttermilk. Butter and margarine are good sources of Vitamin A, but being fats they are high in calories and must also be restricted when there is a tendency to put on too much weight. The diet of the expectant mother should under all conditions be supplemented with cod liver oil or a vitamin concentrate to furnish Vitamin D, and this will also insure adequate Vitamin A.

What about calcium tablets as a substitute for milk, is another question. As pointed out in the booklet "Prenatal Care," put out by the Children's Bureau, calcium tablets are not a complete substitute for milk because they do not furnish protein or the vitamin riboflavin.

The normal protein requirement for women is 60 grams, but during pregnancy this is increased to 85 grams. A quart of milk furnishes 32 grams of protein, and each ounce of lean meat furnishes 7 grams. One egg and one ounce of cheese furnish 7 grams each. At least a quarter of a pound of lean meat a day is desirable, and at least one egg a day. Smaller amounts of protein are furnished in the wholemeal cereal and bread and in vegetables.

Additional iron is also of paramount importance. Nature stores iron in the liver of the baby. If the diet does not furnish enough of this mineral, the new mother will be anemic, tired and flabby. Moreover, she will have a most difficult time restoring her health and figure to normal. Meat, eggs and green leafy vegetables are good sources of iron and needed daily. Meat organs are excellent, and it's a good plan to include them twice each week.

"Prenatal Care" emphasizes that when the doctor advises less salt, none should be added to the cooking. The other members of the family can season their food later. After a few days, salt will not be missed.

A warning against too many rich foods is also given. Cake, candy, jelly, pastries, soft drinks and other "goodies" can send weight sky-high, take away appetite for the protective foods and lessen vitality.

This excellent booklet "Prenatal Care" is for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C. The price is 15 cents.

WOOD CARVER TURNS ICE CARVER
Easton Greene puts finishing touch on a swan.

SOMETHING SPECIAL FOR PARTY

Ice-Carving Is Centerpiece To Complete Table Decor

By AGNES REASOR OLMSTEAD

Hostesses faced with staging an unusual party in the next few months for the sweet girl graduate, the June bride, or any other special event, can take heart—we found an answer! Club chairmen planning a fancy luncheon to conclude the year's work might find a clue here, too.

The trick is to use a dramatic centerpiece of sculptured ice, plain or in colors, lighted from underneath, and either surrounded by flowers or holding enticing food.

"Atlanta hostesses can have any thing they want, carved from ice," said Easton Greene, the creator of the spectacular pieces. "Ice companies carry swans and relish baskets in stock but we can carve any design for any occasion if we have a two-day advance order."

Greene was a furniture designer who learned wood carving from his father. When he developed a dust allergy he picked up his wood chisels and applied his skills to a block of ice.

"I can carve a three-foot swan in about an hour but it takes about two hours to carve bunnies pulling a cart. The most unusual thing I ever carved was a casket with a man in it which was used on the speaker's table for a mortician's 'banquet,' said the soft-spoken ice artist.

The result of Greene's talents we saw at a luncheon for the Southern Ice Exchange Convention. The Spring baskets of ice were filled with dozens of bright radish roses, black and green olives and carrot curls.

The tossed salad was served from an ice cart pulled by a pair of ice bunnies; and every one helped himself to butter from a brood of yellow chickens shaped from butter and—yes, guessed it—bedded on ice.

Nut meats—pecans, roasted almonds, filberts, or cooked chestnuts—are all delicious added to a bread stuffing for poultry.

Manners a la Mode

By YOLANDE GWIN

DEAR MISS GWIN:

I have been invited to lunch with a business associate at a hotel. I know it is an obligation affair, and I know she can not afford to entertain in this manner. Knowing this would it be proper for me to suggest tipping the waiter since she will pay the check?

J. H. P., Columbus

Answer. Your hostess not only pays for the lunch but also tips the waiter as for the expense, I feel sure that she has investigated the price and is doing what she can afford and what she thinks best.

DEAR MISS GWIN:

I had planned to be married, but the wedding has been called off. I am returning the wedding presents and I want to know if I should make any explanation in the notes which I send with the gifts?

Once A bride-elect.

Answer. Only a brief explanation is necessary. I feel sure that all who sent you presents know that the wedding has been called off, so there is no reason to go into that. And then too, it is a private affair and I see no reason for you to discuss it. Just write a brief note expressing your appreciation of the thought in sending the present.

DEAR MISS GWIN:

I am a teen-ager and I want to know when I go to a big high school dance should Daddy or my date give me the money to check my wrap?

Teen-ager

Answer. It would be a thoughtful and considerate thing for your date to take care of the coat checks, but it is a wise girl who takes along enough small change of her own—or that which Daddy gives her, to pay for her wrap check. Few of the young boys or the men, for that matter, think of those "little things" but in defense of the men of all ages it is just an oversight rather than a lack of courtesy. Of course if both wraps—his and yours—are left at a main checking stand such as in a hotel, the man most certainly takes care of the check.

Let Comfort Guide Choice In Chair Buy

By SCARLETT BLANTON

Are you one of those people who continually clutch his midsection, aft, wailing, "Oh, my aching back?" Maybe it's not the back-breaking tasks you've done. Maybe it's the chair you've been sitting in.

A useful little folder, "How to Buy Straight Chairs" has been published, giving the do's and don'ts of "chair-buying."

The folder stresses comfort as the first objective in chair-buying. To sit comfortably, one should have a straight chair that supports the body in a relaxed, normal posture for the length of the sitting period. And they remind you that good posture is the same for everybody regardless of size or height, because it supports the vital organs in a position to function effectively.

Before buying a straight chair, look carefully at the seat of the chair. The ideal seat is saddle shaped, because this natural scooped seat fits body contours better than a flat surface. The scoop, however, should not be deep enough to confine the body to one spot. In that case, tall and short people could not comfortably adapt to the use of the chair back.

A good average width for the chair seat is 18 inches. During long sitting periods, people make frequent shifts of weight from side to side, accompanied by crossing feet or knees, or sliding feet forward or backward in front of chair. Thus, the chair seat needs to be wide enough for the person to shift easily without losing balance.

Many people who buy chairs don't consider height an important factor. The seat height of a chair makes the difference of whether a person is completely comfortable or tires easily. The average seat height is 18 inches from the floor, but should be bought according to the height of the user. The back height is also dependent on the preference of the user. For the greatest freedom in use of the arms, the height of the back should clear the shoulder blades. Typists, pianists, and people who sew prefer this height.

A chair does not need to support the lower back, as the rigid pelvic bones support this area of the body. If vertical splinted or padded chairs are used in the back of the chair, they should rise from the seat in a concave line, adaptable to body curves.

For relaxed support of the body, the upper part of the chair back should slant backward as it rises.

When buying straight chairs, one should also consider construction. Test the chair for rigidity, and see that it stands up firmly under pressure.

Also check to see that the legs stand squarely on the floor, and are substantial for the size of the furniture. If the grain follows the shape of the post, it will stand unusual strain.

If you have trouble with lipstick "running" into tiny pore lines around your mouth, smooth powder base around the contours of your mouth when you are applying it to your face. Blot with a tissue. Enjoying the Middle Years

By HARRY CASEY

An increasing problem of longer-living Georgians is how to make productive use of the Middle Years—those years between forced retirement and the age of physical and mental exhaustion. Harry Casey offers Constitution readers tips on making the Middle Years happy, active and financially rewarding.

Carlyle was not far wrong when he said: "Biography is the most universally pleasant and profitable of all reading." And it would be difficult for an American to find a more inspiring life story than that of Oliver Wendell Holmes. His distinguished service on the United States Supreme Court began when he was 61—an age at which many men are laying down their loads.

Holmes did not retire from the bench until he was 91. His brilliant decisions are still read and studied. Even at retirement, his young mind was still at the height of his powers. He was incorrigibly young.

It is possible, you see, to be old at 30 and young at 90. Your real age is more or less up to you. How you think, how you act—these indicate your real age regardless of the calendar.

What are the signs of old age? One authority answers this way: "You are probably growing ancient if you are increasingly careless about your personal appearance; if young people greatly annoy you; if you revive and cherish old grudges and prejudices; if you dwell too tiresomely on past experiences; if you are complaining and bitter toward the people around you."

On the other hand, if you have a keen interest in a hobby or other constructive activity, it

SLIPCOVERS SHOULD BE SMOOTH FIT

Mrs. Alex Lindholm of 208 Eureka Drive, N. E., makes and fits her own slipcovers, balancing the large floral print on the chair above with solid fabrics in key colors on other items of furniture.

GIVE CHAIRS PROFESSIONAL LOOK

Tailor New Slipcovers To Precise Lines of Article

Today, slip covers play an important part in decorating. Slip covers should fit as smoothly as a perfectly tailored suit, or the effect is lost. If accurate measurements are taken, and care is taken in exactly following the lines of the piece of furniture when cutting, the amateur can turn out slip covers that would do credit to a professional.

The classic type of slip cover, and the one most suitable for many different types of rooms is the plain tailored cover with welted seams and box-pleated skirt. This may be varied by the use of a ruffle in informal rooms.

The fabric chosen should suit the type of room. Use linens, chintz, damask and rough-textured cottons and rayons for formal period or modern rooms, finished with trim box-pleated skirt. Suitable decorative fabric designs for Early American or Provincial rooms may be ruffled-skirted. Modern patterns in the new fabrics are especially bold in designs, although this tendency is noticeable in period fabrics as well. Colors are clear and bright.

Fabrics for slip covers should obviously be heavy enough to tailor well, and not so heavy as to make bulky seams. Chintz, cretonne, linen, light rep, twill, cotton cheviot weaves and many others lend themselves to neat work.

Select slip covers that express your room, your family, and your tastes. Patterns that harmonize with the color and design of your decorating scheme, fabrics that take family activities into consideration. Pick out practical wear-hards for the household of active growing youngsters; dignified styles for the home of sophisticated adults.

Use stripes and simple pleated treatments if you want to minimize a chair's proportion; large florals and flounces to make a piece seem bigger and more important. Remember—slip covers can do two things—help a misfit sofa or other old piece to attractive freshness and protect new upholstery.

Great Things Ahead
For Robert Q. Lewis

By PAUL JONES

Robert Q. Lewis told us shortly before he boarded an airliner for New York Sunday that he is negotiating with a major film company to star in a movie—yet untitled.

"The thing," teesee's 29-year-old bachelor said, "will be a Harold Lloyd-type play. It's still in the talking stage because I have several irons in the fire in New York."

One of the hottest irons is a bid from NBC-TV. That network, which has been trying to woo actor Robert Q. for several weeks, has been trying to woo actor Robert Q. for several weeks. Bob is a free lancer, which enables him to make his own decisions.

While here, Lewis talked with Penthouse Theater officials over the possibility of appearing in a musical in the arena theater. Although he has had few opportunities to display his voice, Lewis is recognized as a top notch crooner.

Red Cross officials reported after his tireless tour of the city that Lewis was "one of the most co-operative celebrities" ever to appear here.

CAPSULE REVIEWS—Pulitzer playhouse last Friday night on WSB-TV outdid itself for the second consecutive week with a play done with all the finesse of a Broadway production. "Valley Forge" with Albert Dekker was superb. Production qualities were on par with the great "Mary of Scotland" a week earlier.

Fred Allen proved once again Saturday night that teesee has got his number. The sour-faced comic's gags fell flat on their face as he emceed the 90-minute Show of Shows on WSB-TV.

A DECATUR FAMILY took exception to our recent article on "Celebrity Time" (WAGA-TV Sunday nights) and wrote: "Every member of the family still awake at Celebrity Time enjoys the show. At breakfast this morning we took our family vote and we're afraid you wouldn't like our verdict. We've decided you're neurotic because you never enjoyed any goody-

Yancey Bros. Prepares To Open New Northside Dr. Plant

To Climax Long Months Of Effort

Yancey Bros. Co., for over 30 years a distributor of "Caterpillar" Diesel tractors, engines, motor graders, and earth-moving equipment, will move on or about March 1 into their new plant at 1540 Northside Dr., N. W., Atlanta.

The new plant, which houses Yancey's Atlanta office and parts, shop and service departments, is located on a 15-acre tract of land just outside Atlanta on U. S. Highway 41. The buildings include 75,000 square feet of floor area under roof, and are constructed in a modern design of brick, masonry, steel and aluminum. They are located on the Seaboard Air Line Railway.

The Company, which has occupied its present building at 632-40 Whitehall St., S. W., since 1921, has distributed earth-moving and construction machinery and supplies for over 30 years.

Their moving was forced by the extension of Atlanta's new West Bypass Expressway, which will cut into Stewart Ave., S. W., at their present location.

Officials of the company announced that the new building will enable Yancey Bros. Co. to give even faster, more efficient service to their customers, since the new plant is laid out according to the latest principles of design. This includes the service and parts departments, where the latest machinery and methods are used. For many years, the Company has operated the most fully equipped heavy machinery repair shop in the Southeast.

Under the presidency of Goodloe H. Yancey, Yancey Bros. Co. has grown from a small beginning in 1912 to the position of one of the Southeast's largest distributors of "Caterpillar" Diesel earth-moving machinery and other nationally known makes of construction and earth-moving machinery and supplies.

Under Yancey Bros. Co. employs approximately 180 persons. Their main office is in Atlanta, with a branch in Augusta, Ga., and sales offices in Macon, Rome and Gainesville.

Officers of the Company are:

LAST WORD IN LASTING BEAUTY—Applied over any surface, Cast-O-Stone gives your home new charm and enhances its value through the years. For full information, call HEMlock 1412, nights and Sundays, Main 3440, or visit the Cast-O-Stone Company, 451 Ponce de Leon Ave., N. E.

'Cast-O-Stone,' Lasting Exterior For Homes, Now Available Here

Cast-O-Stone is here!

Sam Isenberg, for many years in the local home construction and remodeling field, takes pleasure in announcing today that his firm, the Cast-O-Stone Company, 451 Ponce de Leon Ave., N. E., has been appointed exclusive Cast-O-Stone agency for Georgia and South Carolina.

What is Cast-O-Stone? Is the question many thoughtful homeowners—those who desire the best for their property—have asked. Called a "Triumph of Nature and Science," Cast-O-Stone is a hand-sculptured, modern material for building new homes and renewing old ones.

As officials of the firm pointed out today in their announcement, Cast-O-Stone is the lasting exterior for homes. Everyone knows that stone is the longest-lasting material known to man, and discriminating homeowners who have studied and compared building materials are choosing Cast-O-Stone because of its proven endurance.

Already tested for many years in other sections of the United States, Cast-O-Stone actually improves with age, according to testing laboratories. The longer its exposure to "weathering," the richer its beauty. This fact is confirmed by owners of homes that received their Cast-O-Stone "beauty treatment" many years ago.

Stone Finish Applied Over Any Surface

Another feature of importance is that Cast-O-Stone can be applied over any surface. Specially-trained crews apply this distinctive material over asbestos shingles, brick, cinder block, weatherboard, stucco and concrete block without difficulty.

Mr. Isenberg further points out that Cast-O-Stone is not a cheap process—not just another "siding substitute." But Cast-O-Stone is economical in the long run. The first cost is the last... no upkeep... and no further repair or re-finishing is needed. It is also noteworthy that although applied by man, it takes the appearance of natural stone. Cast-O-Stone homes give a feeling of stability and security to the families that live in them.

A major home improvement, Cast-O-Stone also is used for game rooms, dens, club rooms, etc. Its rich coloring not only adds a bright, cheery atmosphere, but also seems to enlarge the room—an illusion created by the blending of many colors. It also allows for the development of strikingly original designs and embellishments, such as arches, pilasters, columns and Old English effects—in fact, almost any scheme of design the homeowner chooses.

The Cast-O-Stone Company offers immediate installation at this time. FHA terms are available, it was announced, and the home of property owner may choose easy monthly payments to suit his budget requirements. For full details and estimates without obligation, call HEMlock 1412 (nights and holidays, Main 3440), write or visit the Cast-O-Stone Company, 451 Ponce de Leon Ave., N. E., between Parkway Dr. and Boulevard, N. E. See the beautiful Cast-O-Stone showroom at this address. One of the most striking displays of its type in the Southeast, it is arranged to assist homeowners in making their own selection of colors and tone effects.

The firm announces that applications for dealerships in cities in Georgia and South Carolina are now being accepted. Interested dealers may contact the Cast-O-Stone Company at the above telephone numbers and address.

THEY WORK FOR YOUR REST

Experienced workmen of the Imperial Bedding Company, 135 Auburn Ave., N. E., convert your old mattress into a new, comfortable innerspring mattress. Call WALnut 5797 for pick up and prompt delivery service.

Imperial Bedding Co. Features New Innerspring Mattresses

If you toss and turn at night and find it difficult to get a comfortable night's sleep, don't reach for that bottle of sleeping pills. Could be—you need a new mattress!

The Imperial Bedding Company of Atlanta recommends with utmost confidence their fine custom-made mattresses as one of the best ways in the world to assure restful slumber. Not only do they sell new mattresses, but they also convert your old mattress into a new innerspring mattress.

Located at 135 Auburn Avenue, a block from Piedmont Avenue, the Imperial Bedding Company was established 23 years ago. They have what they consider one of the finest mattress factories in this section. Tom Moore, owner and operator, has been in the mattress business all of his life, taking over full ownership of the company after the death of his father.

The Imperial Bedding Company specializes in innerspring mattresses. They are of all-steel construction, with each coil locked in place. They use many hundreds of the famous "S.O.S." innerspring coil units in every mattress. Precision made, the S.O.S. innerspring unit coils possess specially patented features, and the entire unit is assembled by exclusive methods to retain shape, position and buoyancy.

Mr. Moore points out that each coil in an Imperial Bedding Company innerspring mattress is designed to provide the ultimate in comfort, strength and lasting service. Each coil end is knotted on a patented "non-slip" offset to keep its shape. Helical springs hold all coils in position, adding resiliency.

With a shortage of steel in prospect for civilian use, as the nation's defense program gets under way, anyone contemplating the purchase of an innerspring mattress is urged to do so without delay. Your Imperial Bedding Company innerspring mattress will give you many years of trouble-free service.

One-day service is featured by Imperial Bedding Company. Telephone WALnut 5797 for pickup and delivery, or visit the firm's showroom and office at 135 Auburn Avenue, N. E.

Morgan Co. In Increase Of 20 Pct. Here

The Roy F. Morgan Agency, Mutual of Omaha, announces that in 1950 total business done by the agency was increased at the rate of 20 percent, which achievement places the agency among the very top leaders in new business production for the entire country. In addition to this phenomenal increase in business the local agency paid a staggering sum of $1,384,484.51 to Georgia policyholders in 1950.

The accompanying photograph illustrates only one of the thousands of Georgians who daily benefit from protection carried with the local Mutual of Omaha Agency. The Rev. Felton Williams who is a widely known figure throughout Atlanta and the entire State of Georgia for the work that he is doing in missions and in work with underprivileged children, has carried his disability income protection with the Roy F. Morgan Agency since 1936. Rev. Williams in October of 1950 became ill and while he was recuperating in a local hospital was unfortunate enough to suffer a fall which resulted in a fracture of his leg.

Since October, Mutual of Omaha has been privileged to be of service to this fine policyholder in the presentation of regular checks covering his loss of time. Mutual of Omaha first came to Georgia in 1926, and in that portion of a year paid less than $500 in claims, however, 10 years later in 1936 a total of $97,083.59 was paid out to disabled Georgians. In another 10-year period to illustrate the tremendous growth of the agency in Atlanta and the amount of claims paid to Georgia people, it is found that the year of 1946 saw this agency pay to Georgia people a total of $721,124.65. This figure grew to the $1,384,484.51 at the end of 1950 and all of these claims were paid locally by the Roy F. Morgan Agency, thereby resulting in a convenience on the part of claimants in having their benefits paid locally and promptly.

In addition to a complete line of hospitalization policies providing surgeons' fees and medical expense benefits in the hospital, Mutual of Omaha offers its special line of disability income contracts providing lifetime benefits for all employed people, ages 16 to 70 years of age. Employed people of nearly any kind of an occupation can qualify for this exact type of income protection and these policy contracts have been designed to step into the picture when the breadwinner becomes disabled from either sickness or accident which often times results in a loss of income and, which in most instances sees a tremendous increase in the expenses.

REV. FELTON WILLIAMS RECEIVES BENEFITS—A representative of the Roy F. Morgan Agency of Mutual of Omaha is seen presenting a check for benefits due Rev. Felton Williams in connection with a recent serious disability. Rev. Williams, who is widely known in Atlanta for his wonderful work with underprivileged children, became disabled in October of 1950 and while recuperating, he fell in his hospital room fracturing a leg. To the present time Rev. Williams is still disabled and is the recipient of regular checks from a disability income policy he has carried with Mutual of Omaha since 1936.

Mutual of Omaha is currently, in addition to its wide newspaper and magazine advertising coverage sponsoring the Bob Considine show which appears on WSB-TV on Saturday afternoons at 5:45 and this company is also sponsoring Bob Considine in a nationwide coverage on the National Broadcasting hookup on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, at which time Considine presents a commentary on the week's news and presents interviews with people in the current news.

In addition to the Atlanta office of Mutual of Omaha special district agencies are maintained in strategic cities throughout the entire State of Georgia for the convenience of its policyholders in obtaining local service. There are some attractive territories open at the present time and agency inquiries are invited. If you are interested in representing Mutual of Omaha in Georgia, or if you are interested in obtaining for yourself or your family a plan of disability income protection or a complete coverage on hospitalization, it is suggested that you write to the Roy F. Morgan Agency, Sixth Floor, William-Oliver Building, Atlanta, Ga., or call CYpress 5891.

CONSTIPATION GONE—FEELS LIKE OLD SELF

"For the past 3 years I have eaten ALL-BRAN every morning for breakfast. It's no mean trick for a man my age (73) to be regular. Thanks to ALL-BRAN I am." Wm. H. Temple, Sr., 124 Brown St., Watseka, Ill. One of many unsolicited letters from ALL-BRAN users. If you, too, suffer from constipation due to lack of dietary bulk, eat an ounce (about 1/4 cup) of crisp Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily, and drink plenty of water! 16 Days in Refrigeration Cools Stevedore's Zeal

AUCKLAND, N. Z., Feb. 25—(AP)—Ivan Dunkley, 44, a stevedore from Kingston, Jamaica, announced with deep sincerity Sunday that he'll never work on a refrigerated ship again. This is why: Last Jan. 31, he was helping to load the British freighter, Port Phillip, at Kingston, and worked a night overtime shift for the first time because he needed the money. After 15 hours of labor, he fell asleep in the freezing chamber. When he awoke, the compartment was locked and he could not attract attention of the crew. Fortunately, ordinary cargo was stowed in the chamber and it was not at its coldest. Nevertheless, frigid temperatures from the adjoining cold storage room penetrated his bones and the door resisted his frantic efforts to break out. For 16 days he lived on fruit juice from tins, rubbed his frigid body with rum and prayed for a miracle. On the afternoon of Feb. 16, eight days out of Auckland, an inspecting officer found Dunkley, alive but in the last stages of exhaustion, Dunkley was lying near the door, trying to get air. Removed to sick bay, he recovered. On arrival here, he made his pronouncement about never working refrigerated ships again and added that his wife never wanted him to work nights in the first place.

Tech Conducts Bridge Meet

Taking part in the tournament here were Bruce Sams and Haywood Sullivan, of Savannah; Marvin and Raymond Wallace, of Atlanta; Charles Harris, of Augusta, and Houston LeClair, of Birmingham, Ala., and Bill Jones and Bill Bollath, of Atlanta. Sams and Sullivan recently placed first in collegiate competition at Tech and the Wallace placed second.

Seven Cities Make Milk Honor Roll

Seven Georgia cities were included by the U. S. Public Health Service in Washington on its most recent "honor roll" of safe milk communities. The honor roll listing means that the total milk supply sold in the corporate limits rates 90 percent or higher, according to a rating method based on sanitary requirements recommended by the Public Health Service. Columbus, Cordale, Quitman and West Point won the honor roll rating among communities pasteurizing all market milk, while LaGrange, Macon and Thomaston were on the honor list for towns marketing both raw and pasteurized milk. A total of 164 cities and counties throughout the nation were on the honor roll. Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, announced in the future no community will be eligible for the special listing unless the milk supply is under a program of official inspection and laboratory control, either by the community, the county, a milk control district or the State. Grants in Aid $57,306,898

Fifteen percent of the $392,518,088 total federal revenue collected from Georgia during the year ended July 30, 1950, was paid back to the State as "grants in aid," a report by the Senate Expenditures Committee in Washington shows. The Government returned $57,306,898 to the State for various grants-in-aid programs such as old-age assistance, highway work and the like. In New York State the ratio of grants in aid to federal revenue was only 2 percent, but in Mississippi it was 38 percent, the Senate report said.
